STIMSON SEES ACCORD WITH LATIN AMERICA

ANSWERS CRITICISM OF HOOVER ATTITUDE

Recognition of Governments Born of Revolutions Is Defended in Talk.

New York, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Criticism of President Wilson's policy toward Latin America was coupled by Secretary Stimson tonight with high praise of this country's general attitude for a century past toward the republics lying to the south.

Addressing the Council of Foreign Relations, the Secretary of State outlined the American policy of recognition, and characterized the United States' stand upon the traffic in arms to countries suffering from internal strife as "blazing the way for the subsequent growth of the law of nations."

He took occasion also to answer "criticism of our decisions" concerning recognition of the seven Latin-American republics overthrown by revolution in the past ten months, and at the same time gave his interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine as "a declaration of the United States versus Europe—not of the United States versus Latin America."

Praises General Policy.

Admitting some "temporary intrusions into the domestic affairs of some" Latin-American republics, Mr. Stimson maintained that the United States' "policy, in its general conception, has been a noble one." He asserted, however, it had been "radically departed from" by President Wilson.

In 1913, the Secretary of State said, the late President decreed cooperation was possible only when the government concerned was "based upon law, not upon arbitrary or irregular force," and then put this "policy into action in respect to recognizing the government of President Victoriano Huerta in Mexico.

"Although Huerta's government was in de facto possession," Mr. Stimson said, "Mr. Wilson refused to recognize it, and he sought through the influence and pressure of his great office to force it from power. Armed conflict followed with the forces of Mexico, and disturbed relations between us and that republic lasted until a comparatively few years ago.

Avoided Wilson's Practice.

"The present administration has refused to follow the policy of Mr. Wilson and has followed consistently the former practice of this Government since the days of Jefferson.

"As soon as it was reported to us, through our diplomatic representatives, that the new governments in Bolivia, Peru, Argentina, Brazil and Panama were in control of the administrative machinery of the state, with the apparent general acquiescence of their people, and they were willing and apparently able to discharge their international and conventional obligations, they were recognized by our Government."

Mr. Stimson added that this policy had been uniformly followed by the present administration, save where affected by preexisting treaty.

The recent recognition of Guatemala was described as falling under this latter category. Mr. Stimson explained that the United States had agreed to adhere to a treaty adopted by Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica. Under it recognition would not be granted if the new president of the country concerned had been a leader in a preceding revolution. The new Guatemalan government, he added, was recognized only after the resignation of Gen. Orellano, who set himself up as provisional president last December.

Distinction Is Apparent.

"The distinction between this departure, which was suggested by the five republics themselves and in which we have acted at their earnest desire and in cooperation with them,"

Three New Lawyers Join Butler Defense

Former Envoy to Japan, Officer and Retired Marine Named.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The lawyers who will defend Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler when he is court-martialed for calling Premier Mussolini a hit-and-run driver now number four, three more having been retained yesterday.

The three are Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, Ambassador to Japan in the Wilson administration; Col. A. M. Holding, leader of the bar in Chester, Pa., Gen. Butler's home county, and Lieut. Col. Jesse F. Dyer, of the Marine Corps, who now is at the Naval War College at Newport, R. I.

That the cast of characters in what promises to be a dramatic trial will include more celebrities was indicated last night when it was learned that Gen. Butler's counsel, in calling character witnesses, will summon such men as Gen. John J. Pershing and Maj. Gen. James Harbord, retired.

In the meantime a story that was circulated at the beginning of the case was revived—the story that President Hoover was responsible for the court-martial of Gen. Butler. The President ordered this drastic action, it was said, at the advice of Secretary of State Stimson, who, on the day that the court-martial was an-

12 MEMBERS HURT IN TOKYO DIET ROW

FIGHT OVER NAVAL PACT

Tokyo, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Bitterness over the London naval treaty caused a free-for-all fight today in an anteroom of the Diet, during which a dozen persons, two Diet members, were injured.

The fight started when a member of the Seiyukai (opposition) party wielded a dagger during criticism of Foreign Minister Shidehara's explanation in the Diet that Emperor Hirohito, by approving the treaty, had proved it did not endanger the security of Japan.

The explanation was regarded by government opponents as an effort to blame the emperor for any defect in the treaty.

Fifty men milled about the anteroom, wielding clubs and hurling ash trays and anything they could lay their hands on.

Several were cut on heads and hands. Others were bruised and cut with broken glass.

The dagger wielder was arrested. He was not a member of the Diet.

Baron Shidehara, acting head of the government since Premier Hamaguchi was shot in November by a fanatical patriot, was in another room during the fighting. Heavily guarded, he left the building immediately.

The fracas followed two days of budget discussions which several times nearly caused near riots. The opposition blocked action on the budget and accused Shidehara of "indiscreet" utterance when he was pointedly questioned on the empire's security as a result of the London treaty.

A storm of protest arose when the foreign minister mentioned the emperor as having approved the treaty. Although Shidehara quickly explained his reference to the sovereign, regarded by the Japanese as descended from the sun goddess, was a slip of the tongue and the government was wholly responsible, the storm continued to rage.

Before and since the emperor signed the treaty in October, the Hamaguchi government withstood charges that its action in accepting somewhat less than 70 per cent of naval strength, as compared with the United States and Great Brit-

MITCHELL TO FIGHT SENATE POWER SUIT

Rover to Institute Action on Smith Appointment; Not to Argue Case.

PLAN SPECIAL COUNSEL

Special counsel will fight out quo warranto proceedings authorized Thursday by the Senate to determine the right of George Otis Smith to hold office as chairman of the newly created Federal Power Commission, despite the fact that United States Attorney Leo A. Rover will appear as the plaintiff.

This was made clear yesterday in a statement issued by the District of Columbia prosecutor and in a letter sent from Attorney General William D. Mitchell, which Mr. Rover made public. The Senate seeks to remove Mr. Smith, in an attempt to reverse the confirmation it had previously given him, and which had become operative.

The position of the Department of Justice, supporting President Hoover in his stand that Mr. Smith can not now be removed, is shown in the letter the Attorney General sent to Mr. Rover. This both reveals that the Department of Justice will name special counsel to defend the President's viewpoint and that Mr. Rover will not take a position in court contrary to that already maintained by the Department of Justice.

Shortly before the letter from the Attorney General was made public United States Attorney Rover issued a statement in which he declared he had told the Senate that, while he would lend his name for the purpose of instituting the proceedings, his office would not prepare the papers or prosecute the cause, and that the Senate would have to employ special counsel.

Attorney General Mitchell's letter follows:

"My dear Mr. Rover: There has been laid before me a copy of Senate resolution 415 to which you have directed my attention, and which requests you to institute proceedings in quo warranto, to test the right of Mr. George Otis Smith to hold office as a member of the Federal Power Commission.

"I know of no good reason why this department should throw any obstacles in the way of having this question settled in the courts. On the contrary, we should do all that is necessary to satisfy the request of the Senate that the matter be adjudicated. I doubt if quo warranto

Static From Police Sending Set Is Basis of Complaints

Engineer, However, Says Only Improperly Installed, Inefficient Receivers, or Ones Near Tenth Precinct, Get Interference From Station WPDW.

Criminals are not the only ones having interference from police broadcasting station WPDW. Peaceful citizens are getting interference, too, because the police alarms are coming in on their radio sets.

Since the inauguration of the police broadcasting station, the Federal Radio Commission has received more than a score of complaints that the high frequency station is interfering with the regular broadcasts.

The fault, however, does not rest with the police transmitting station. It rests with inefficient or improperly installed sets owned by the complainants, according to Lieut. E. K. Jett, an engineer of the commission.

Lieut. Jett said the only persons getting interference are those located in the general vicinity of the stations who own radio sets using old type equipment which is nonselective. The average receiver, he said, will have no interference, even if the set is located within a few blocks of the police transmitting station in the Tenth Precinct.

Even for those who have improperly installed receiving sets, he said, interference is not to be expected more than a few blocks from the station. This interference, he advised, may be removed by the installation of a wave trap or by the modification of the receiving antenna. In this connection he suggests that the antenna be made as short as possible.

If this does not remedy the condition, he advises that a competent service man be called.

Lieut. Jett pointed out that the broadcasting system of WPDW has

WOMAN CLERK SUSPECTED IN STARTING RUN

Alarmist Rumor Believed Traced to Postal Department.

NORMALITY RESTORED AT PERPETUAL OFFICE

Worker Watched as Secret Service Trails Down Other Leads.

A clerk in the Postoffice Department here yesterday was under suspicion as the fabricator of the alarmist rumor which precipitated the two-day run on the Perpetual Building Association.

With normality restored at the institution, after a sustained run throughout Wednesday and Thursday, officials of the banking house gave their unstinted cooperation to secret service agents in an effort to ferret out the source of the malicious reports.

Edward C. Baltz, secretary of the association, remained closeted for long intervals during the day with secret service men, delving into the bank's records in seeking clues and in striving to gather all information that might indicate who was the guilty person.

Woman Being Watched.

While secret service men observing a tight-lipped silence, Mr. Baltz stated that the trail had led conclusively to the Postoffice Department. He admitted that a certain woman clerk there was under surveillance, but added that the secret service agents also were developing other leads in, that department before resolving on any course of action.

"Yes, we have under suspicion a certain woman in the Postoffice Department, whose name we are not at liberty to divulge, pending possible action," Mr. Baltz declared yesterday. "We are not quite certain whether she actually conceived the wild idea or whether by her babbling talk she spread the word among her friends that the bank was not safe."

Exactly 27 persons were in line yesterday morning when the Perpetual opened a quarter of an hour early—at 8:45 o'clock—and a part of this number consisted of persons ready to reopen their accounts there, after drawing money out during the run. The Perpetual announced that in excess of $200,000 had been deposited yesterday, as against a normal daily deposit of approximately $80,000. One patron reposited $31,000 withdrawn during the run, bank officials said.

Funs Not Exhausted.

A check revealed that less than 3 per cent of the 33,000 shareholders of the institution had withdrawn their funds during the hectic two days. Conforming with expressed belief of officials at the height of the run, the two-day demand for withdrawals failed to exhaust the cash reserves which the Perpetual had in its own vaults when the excitement started.

The heavy police guard on duty at the bank was lifted during the day, after the bulk of money advanced from the Treasury and various Washington banks had been distributed to other institutions.

"As a result of the unfaltering confidence of the large majority of our patrons in the essential and basic soundness of the Perpetual Building Association, coupled with the prompt and generous cooperation of the banks, press and business interests of Washington, today we can re-

DEFENSE HEARD AS CANNON HAS DAY AT INQUIRY

TESTIMONY COVERS FINANCES OF BOARD

Because of developments yesterday there is no telling now when the investigating into the charges against Bishop James Cannon, jr., will come to an end. The bishop had the floor yesterday and consumed most of the day with his defense. Three sessions of the committee were held, the night session adjourning at 10 o'clock. The hearing probably will go into next week.

The exact nature of the defense he offered is not known. He produced witnesses—at least strangers entered the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, where the investigation is being held, carrying large portfolios and stuffed brief cases. It may be that they were tuning pianos in the church. That is the word that was passed to them as they left the edifice. If this was their errand, then the church's musical instruments were in a bad condition.

Whatever their business was in that church, they kept silent about it when they came out.

Crawford Is Heard.

Among the witnesses who appeared during the day was the Rev. Eugene Crawford, an associate of Bishop Cannon on the Methodist Board of Temperance and Morals. He is the office manager and dispenses the funds which the church appropriates for the board's use. It is understood that he testified with regard to the handling of these funds, and the expense accounts of Bishop Cannon as president of the board.

A hand writing expert, Burt Ferrar of Washington, sat for an hour in the lobby of the church, but was not called inside the committee room. He may return today and give his testimony to counteract that of the experts who testified Thursday for the prosecution.

One of the startling developments in the case was the introduction of documents reflecting on the bishop's conduct, which were identified by witnesses as having been furnished by Mrs. Helen McCallum, who later married Bishop Cannon in London. This is thought to be the strongest point in the prosecution's case. The document is said to be twenty pages long and in the form of an affidavit.

Aided in Defense.

Bishop Cannon is not conducting his case alone. He is being assisted in the examination of witnesses by his eldest son and namesake, Prof. James Cannon 3d, of Duke University, who has been constantly at his side since the hearing began, and by the Rev. Sid Peters, of Virginia, one of the bishop's closest friends. These younger men are relieving the bishop of the physical strain of talking as much as they can, though it is said that on occasion the bishop is on his feet, vibrant with energy, contesting evidence and arguing points of law.

There was a complete change of atmosphere about the hearing yesterday. Much of the tenseness has worn off. The members of the committee have become reconciled to their stay here. Most of them thought and some of them said last night that they expected to get through with the case in two days. None of them had made any arrangements for sup-

Calvin Coolidge Says:

We do not often think what an important service for all the people is performed by the banks. When matters are going smoothly we naturally take results for granted. We assume that in some way banking goes on under its own power something like the flow of water or the rays of the sun.

But our banking system works with a high degree of efficiency because of the skill and industry of the men who conduct it. Scarcely two generations have passed since bank currency was unified and stabilized. Under the old State systems all kinds of bank notes of uncertain value circulated. Now every bank note is worth its face value.

The supply of credit is of enormous importance. In the younger parts of the Nation towns prosper or decline according to the character of the men who operate the banks. We have bank failures but there is no safer place outside the Government to keep money. Our banking system is not yet perfect, but on the whole it is sound and well managed. Governmental and private studies are constantly being made for its improvement. It furnishes the sound currency, abundant credit, and facility of exchange which are the life blood of commerce. The people have no more important public servant.

LEADERS COMPROMISE ON LOAN OF $20,000,000 TO DROUGHT FARMERS

Schall Retracts Tale Linking Hurley, Rheem

Senator's References to Secretary and Failure Stricken Out.

Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, blind senator from the West, created somewhat of a sensation on the floor of the Senate yesterday when he had read to the Senate a statement he had prepared accusing Attorney General William Mitchell of protecting Secretary of War Patrick Hurley in connection with the failure of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co.

Secretary Hurley replied immediately, denying any connection with Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey, and demanded of Senator Schall that he Pact Reported Backed by Hoover May Avert Extra Session.

OMISSION OF 'FOOD' PROVES 'FACE SAVER'

But Longworth Admits Plan Unquestionably Comprehends Anything.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

One of the greatest face-saving expeditions which official Washington has known in a long time came to a dramatic end late yesterday when Senate and House leaders, Republican and Democratic, agreed upon a compromise in the big food fight whereby $20,000,000 is to be made available in loans to the drought-stricken farmers.

The agreement, if it holds, removes the greatest threat of an extra session, and as to its holding there was no question that those party to it had the understanding they were working with the full knowledge of the President. His secretary, Walter Newton, in fact, worked with the fixers at the Capitol all the afternoon.

Earlier the President had been represented by an unquestionable authority as not only being sympathetic to the compromise efforts but also as having originated the principle which was the nub, if not the whole, of the agreement.

Opposite View Given.

Yet, two hours later a lesser White House authority was saying there would be no compromise and that the President had not approved the agreement.

So it will probably remain for today, after the matter has appeared in the public print, to determine whether the agreement will stick.

Under the agreement announced by Speaker Longworth, Majority Leader Tilson, of the House; Senators Watson, McNary, indeed, everybody concerned at the Capitol, the administration wins its fight against the dole, so-called, or the appropriation of $25,000,000 to the Red Cross, while the Democrats, or rather, the Senate, inasmuch as four-fifths of the body favored it, win their original proposition which Secretary of Agriculture Hyde described in December as "dangerously near a dole," an attack which amazed the unsuspecting administration senators, who had approved the plan and had no inkling it was in disfavor.

The plan then was to make available $15,000,000 for loans for food, clothing, medical supplies, or the like.

Makes $20,000,000 Available.

The plan agreed upon is to make $20,000,000 available for loans for anything. In other words, the farmer negotiates his loan by giving a lien upon his crop or other security and spends the money as he likes.

Incidentally, the plan also goes back and makes available, out of the $45,000,000 seed appropriation loan voted before Christmas, loans for the purchase of food for all stock. This point was not greatly in controversy, however, but the seed appropriation provided only for work stock.

Probably a more businesslike structure and one more designed to help the farmer rehabilitate himself is set up in the new plan for the extension of the loans than was contemplated in the original plan.

And when simmered down, the whole plan amounts to nothing more than the Government has been doing for years, financing the farmer through intermediate credit banks and other agencies, save that emergency organizations are created and an emergency fund appropriated.

The question that will naturally arise, however, is why the matter could not have been settled six weeks ago without all of the hullabalioo of an extra session.

Language of Bill.

After providing for all stock, the plan reads:

"There is appropriated * * * the sum of $20,000,000 to be used by the

POSTAL LEASE QUIZ INTIMATED BLOCKED

BARTLETT IS QUESTIONED

(Associated Press.)

The suggestion that a grand jury investigation of the St. Paul commercial station postoffice lease was blocked for political purposes was made yesterday by Chairman Blaine, of the Senate committee investigating postal leasing policies.

Senator Blaine questioned former Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett about the circumstances of his trip to St. Paul in July, 1928, shortly before the grand jury was expected to open an inquiry into the lease.

Mr. Bartlett denied he had made it to block the investigation, but admitted that, looking back on it, apparently some one had that in mind.

Recalling that James W. Good, then Western campaign manager for the Republican national committee, had telephoned from President Coolidge's summer home in Wisconsin to District Attorney Drill at St. Paul in connection with the case, Senator Blaine asked Mr. Bartlett:

"Don't you know Good was Western manager of the Republican campaign and this matter was being aired, and the fear was expressed that if the grand jury convened on August 7 it might blow up the campaign in the Northwest, and that it must be stopped at all hazards? Can you say you didn't know that was going on?"

"None of that talk was held with

BONUS ENACTMENT EXPECTED IN 10 DAYS

LEADERS IN AGREEMENT

(Associated Press.)

Enactment "within ten days" of a compromise plan to increase loans to war veterans at a cost of approximately $500,000,000 was predicted yesterday by Representative Bacharach.

Immediately after making this statement the New Jersey Republican, a ranking member of the ways and means committee, conferred with Treasury officials on the legislation.

At the conference he voiced the opinion that a compromise proposal along the lines suggested by Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Co., would meet with approval of all factions in the House and Senate.

Administration leaders expressed the opinion that the President would approve such legislation.

The announcement by Mr. Bacharach followed a lengthy conference between leaders of both parties in the House and Senate. It was intimated they were in agreement.

"We are very hopeful for this plan," Mr. Bacharach said. "If we are going to have legislation, we will have it within ten days. The situation is encouraging."

The substitute plan would compose differences between advocates of immediate cash redemption of veterans' adjusted compensation certificates—at a cost of $3,500,000,000—and opponents of any veterans' aid legislation.

Old Ships, Guided by Radio, To Be Used as Navy Targets

Obsolete Destroyers, Once Valued at $700,000 Each, Will Continue to Lead Useful Lives in Training of Air and Sea Gunners.

Mare Island, Calif., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Plans of the United States Navy to use obsolete destroyers, controlled by radio, as targets during battle practice, were revealed here today.

Tests with the obsolete destroyer Stoddert, which, guided by radio, sped through the sea without a man at the helm, proved the practicability of using World War relics to perfect the aim of modern gunners, officers said.

The Stoddert can be controlled from a shore station or from ships at sea and the old vessel will be taken to San Diego soon to fulfill its destiny at the muzzle end of 5-inch guns.

Once valued at $700,000 each, the old gray destroyers now are worth about $5,000 and will be cheaper targets than rafts, officers said. The rafts cost $15,000 or more.

As soon as the Panama maneuvers are over, which will be in six weeks or two months, a half dozen of the vessels will be equipped with radio apparatus by which the craft can be controlled from a distance of many miles.

Off San Diego, controlled by ether vibrations, the destroyers will dodge through the swells while airmen spray their decks with machine-gun bullets and drop bombs willed with water. Gunners will hurl 5-inch shells at the twisting targets.

The gunners will use "dud" shells—projectiles that do not contain high explosive. By this means, ordnance officers expect to prolong the lives of the veteran destroyers during many seasons of bombing and bombardment.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 4 and 20 Today

Secretary of Agriculture for the following purposes: (1) To make advances or loans to individuals in the drought and (or) storm or hail-stricken areas of the United States for the purpose of assisting in forming local agricultural-credit corporations, live stock companies, or like organizations, or of increasing the capital stock of such corporations, companies or organizations qualified to do business with Federal intermediate credit banks, or to which such privileges may be extended, and (or) of making loans to individuals upon the security of the capital stock of such corporations, companies or organizations, and (2) to make advances or loans to farmers for crop production for the crop of 1931 and for further agricultural rehabilitation in the drought and (or) storm-stricken or hail-stricken areas of the United States.

"The advances and loans made pursuant to this act and amendment thereto shall be secured by liens on crops or by other security under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe."

"Food" Is Dodged.

One of the face-saving features, it will be noticed, is that the word "food" is gotten away from, and this is, too, an omission of more than technical import, in that it removes the emphasis that it is a food loan. It is just a plain, simple loan now.

Yet the four-letter word is what has been causing the Senate and the administration to glare at each other for six weeks and will, indeed, probably be the basis for much recrimination for several days to come.

No sooner was a word twenty or so newspapermen shouted at the fixers yesterday immediately the agreement was announced. From one leader to another they rushed and asked feverishly, "Regardless of all this language, is there a definite understanding that these loans will be made for food?"

This was occasioned by the fact that the language in the $45,000,000 seed appropriation was considered broad enough for loans for food, but Secretary Hyde, after the appropriation was passed, announced none would be made for that purpose.

Consequently the great question this time, "Does it or does it not mean food?"

Speaker Longworth, always very frank, said it unquestionably meant loans for anything, and that was the general interpretation.

SCHALL RETRACTS TALK LINKING HURLEY

strike from the Record his remarks connecting him with the matter. He had requested, Senator Schall said, the Record be cleared, but he emphasized he had not apologized to Secretary Hurley, as had been reported.

Secretary Hurley said he was a stockholder in the Shoreham Investment Co., owner of the Shoreham Building. That was his sole connection with the mortgage company, he said.

Secretary Hurley has been an owner of real estate in the National Capital since the war. One of the buildings he owned here was the Hurley-Wright Building, on the southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, which was occupied for a long time by Shipping Board activities and under Government lease. Secretary Hurley owned the building until recently, it was said. Other Cabinet members also own real estate in Washington.

The statement Senator Schall had read in the Senate was sent to newspapers. The part having reference to the Swartzel, Rheem & Hensey failure follows:

"Mr. Mitchell shows inconsistency in his investigations.

"Just now his investigators are at work on the books of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey, whose failure has so widely affected many residents of this city.

"But has any of the investigators approached the Secretary of War, who is reputed to be the principal owner of the Shoreham Building, upon which the bondholders of this bankrupt concern were assured they had a mortgage?

Refers to "Ethics."

"Could and should not the Secretary of War be called on to state how and why that mortgage was released and the bondholders deprived of their security without any knowledge of what was being done?

"And what about the ethics of a Cabinet officer being engaged in big business in the Nation's Capital? Perhaps the Attorney General does not wish to interrupt the Secretary of War's present efforts to pulace Army officers and corporation lawyers on the courts of our insular possessions."

The United States Attorney's Office and the Department of Justice moved to present to the District grand jury the affairs of the bankrupt firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., while the usual number of civil actions were being filed.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in an official order, told the receivers, Henry P. Blair and Julius I. Peyser, to permit David L. Stern, a builder and contractor, 1412 I street northwest, to examine the books of the company. Stern in a petition filed through Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, told the court he had borrowed $450,000 from the company, but did not know the names of the persons who were holding his notes.

Sues for Balance of Loan.

Stern's case is similar to that of Frank Tomlinson, local architect and builder, who yesterday filed suit to compel the receivers of the firm and noteholders to pay him the balance of a $200,000 loan he obtained from the concern. He said he had borrowed $200,000 but had been paid only $75,000, despite the fact that all his notes had been disposed of.

Carrie O. Allmut, of 1905 H street northwest, filed suit to have Edmund D. Rheem and Luther A. Swartzell removed as trustees of certain property. She alleges she has notes totaling $11,000, of which $5,000 have been guaranteed by Harry Wardman, Rheem's father-in-law, and Thomas P. Bones, an associate of Wardman. She brought her suit through Attorney E. Hilton Jackson.

Nine persons filed suits for return of notes—Elizabeth Shugrue, George M. Hamilton, Kate Rafferty, Josephine E. Jones, Thomas E. Orr, David L. Stern, Lula V. Bird, Bernard E. Young and John I. Cassidy.

The Westchester Development Corporation filed a petition seeking the right to examine the books of the bankrupt and force the receivers to give them other information.

CHARITY DRIVE ENDS $7,000 BEYOND GOAL

RED CROSS WORK HELPS

Marine Officer's Son Youngest Contributor

Lee Maurice Holmes has the distinction of being probably the youngest contributor to the Community Chest. This particular philanthropist was born last December 25 in Quantico, a Christmas gift to Capt. and Mrs. Maurice Gardner Holmes, U. S. M. C. After the baptismal service in Washington Cathedral Thursday his father left a $10 check to be forwarded to the Chest by Bishop James E. Freeman as a present from Lee Maurice.

The infant's offering helped swell past the $1,500 mark the fund which Bishop Freeman and his associates at Mount St. Alban have raised for the charities campaign. This total is exclusive of special gifts made by members of the clergy staff.

The Washington Community Chest achieved victory yesterday with overtime work, and the report luncheon held at the Willard Hotel was turned into a victory meeting when Arthur Hellen, Chest secretary, announced that the $1,950,184.40 quota had been oversubscribed by approximately $7,000.

Work of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross aided materially in putting the campaign of the Chest over. At the start of the drive, the city's $100,000 quota for Red Cross drought relief had been added to the Community Chest campaign.

All money raised by the local chapter toward this fund was to be deducted from the Chest's guarantee of $100,000. Just before Mr. Hellen's announcement that the Chest campaign had met success, Charles E. Howe, vice president of the District Red Cross Chapter, announced that it was holding $37,000 in direct contributions—virtually a contribution of this amount to the Chest.

The amount actually reported at the luncheon meeting was $48,393.53, which added to the $37,000 of the Red Cross, made a total of $86,-093.53 for the day. Previous audited figures of the amount raised during the campaign showed $1,857,688.91 and brought the total actually subscribed to date to $1,943,782.44, or $6,371.96 less than the quota.

The governmental unit, however, has about $13,000 contributed but not yet in the hands of the auditors. The group solicitation unit has several thousand dollars which will come in today or Monday, while the special gifts unit expects to raise about $15,000 additional.

Reports of the various units yesterday were as follows:

Schools unit, $922.50; governmental unit, 2,347 pledges for $16,-395.80; metropolitan unit, 677 pledges for $13,054.64; group solicitation unit, 2,343 pledges for $15,495.59, and special gifts unit, 7 pledges for $2,525.

Roosevelt's Candidacy Predicted by Creager

Mexico City, Feb. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A prediction that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1932 was made here today by R. B. Creager, Democratic national committeeman from Texas, who is visiting Mexico City. Creager also forecast that President Hoover will be renominated by the Republicans.

"If the unemployment situation continues bad the Democrats will have a good chance of electing the next President. If things get better, however, it looks as though Hoover will be reelected.

HOME WINE-MAKING STIRS SENATE FIGHT

Letter Urging Amendment to Ban Grape Concentrates Aired by Tydings.

FEDERAL AID IS ALLEGED

(Associated Press.)

The subject of grape concentrates easily converted into wine brought to the Senate floor yesterday both charges and denials of a "joker" in the Volstead act, and a proposal to amend the act to stem such sales.

A letter from Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, suggesting the amendment was read into the record by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, an antiprohibitionist. It precipitated a debate in which Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, one of the authors of the prohibition amendment, arose again and again to defend the dry law.

Senator Tydings charged that under the Volstead act it was now perfectly legal to manufacture 20 per cent wine in the home, but illegal to make beer or gin." He contended all or none should be permitted.

Dr. Wilson's letter asserted that any one who "believes that the effort to build up a Nation-wide trade in home wine materials has the tacit consent of the so-called dry organizations is undoubtedly in error."

"Certainly, if such a traffic is legal under section 29 of the national prohibition act," it said, "that section should be amended and an effort to amend it should have the support of all those, wet or dry, to whom evasion of the law is distasteful * * *"

Barller, the Maryland senator had read at length from advertisements of a grape concentrate concern which recently has extended its sales campaign to the Capital. He asserted this was being done with Federal aid, since the Farm Board had loaned California grape growers in all approximately $19,000,000.

He quoted also from the report of the Law Enforcement Commission, which had condemned such sales, and from Prohibition Director Woodcock, whom he said had made public figures showing 678,000,000 gallons of 12 per cent wine had been produced in the past five years as compared with 229,000,000 in the five

MEYER IS OPPOSED AS FINANCIAL TOOL

DUBBED OFFICE SEEKER

(Associated Press.)

Opposition to confirmation of Eugene Meyer as governor of the Federal Reserve Board "because of his intimate relationship with Wall street as a stock broker, speculator and promoter" was expressed before a Senate banking subcommittee yesterday by Representative McFadden (Republican), Pennsylvania.

McFadden, who is chairman of the House banking committee, also charged that the New York financier was placed on the board by the "big financial and power interests" in order to get control of the Reserve System.

Mr. Meyer, who has attended every one of the seven days of hearings on his nomination, commented after the witness had finished a long statement:

"Mr. McFadden has given a lot of interesting information, and some of it isn't so."

Further reasons why Mr. Meyer should not be confirmed were given by McFadden as his "dominating position in the chemical and power industry, both personally and through his close family and business and financial relationships," and his "close affiliation with Paul M. Warburg, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Lazard Freres and J. P. Morgan Co."

He reiterated Mr. Meyer was a "professional office seeker," and had given $25,000 to the Hoover campaign of 1928. He charged Mr. Meyer in 1909 wrote an article defending short-selling on the stock market.

Mr. Meyer said he was young then and did not believe that now.

HOOVER TAKES HAND IN JUDGESHIP FIGHT

Asks Senator Schall to List Several Acceptable Men for Appointment.

PROPOSAL IS DECLINED

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday entered the controversy between Attorney General Mitchell and Senator Schall over the appointment of a Minnesota Federal judge with a suggestion that the senator withdraw the name of his candidate and submit a list of "fit appointees."

The Mitchell-Schall dispute recently came into the open by a statement from the Attorney General refusing to recommend to the President Schall's candidate for the Minnesota post, Ernest Michel, a Minneapolis attorney.

The senator, however, declined to withdraw Michel's name.

In a letter to Senator Schall, made public at the White House yesterday, President Hoover joined the Attorney General in declining to accept Michel's name. He suggested a list of eight or ten names be drawn up of "men whom you are sure will be dominated by no one."

"From such a list," the President added, "I shall hope to find some one with fitness for that position."

Senator Schall centered his new attack upon Mitchell principally upon his recommendation of Albert L. Watson to be Federal judge in Pennsylvania. He contended the Attorney General was opposing Mr. Michel, although admitting he had "fair ability."

"There was undisputed testimony before the judiciary committee," Senator Schall said, "that Mr. Watson's ability was very moderate to say the least; that as a common pleas judge he had been reversed in seven or eight out of ten cases. Yet did Mr. Mitchell oppose him? Not at all; he merely sidestepped and his evasive, shifty and underhand course led a majority of the committee to approve the nomination and a majority of the Senate, including myself, to vote for it."

The Minnesota senator expressed the opinion Mr. Mitchell "did not really consider Mr. Watson qualified, but was afraid to say so." He contended Mr. Watson had been backed by W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. The Attorney General, he asserted, "has unalterably opposed a personal injury lawyer of fair ability because that type is a thorn in the side of the corporations Mr. Mitchell has long served and still favors."

Arkansas Resents Mencken Criticism

Resolution Adopted in House Replies to Editorial on "Famine."

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Arkansas resents the satirical shafts of Henry L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury, but admits he has a way with words.

Mencken was condemned in a resolution adopted by the House of Representatives today for a recent article on Arkansas in the Baltimore Sun. The same resolution, however, paid tribute to his literary ability.

In the article in question, entitled "Famine," Mencken said, among other things, that the Red Cross might feed Arkansans this year, but they would be no better off next year.

The resolution asserted Mencken "has tried for years to make Arkansas the butt of coarse ribaldry and diatribes." It requested the Sun to give equal prominence to a reply to Mencken by Dallas T. Herndon, Arkansas State historian.

$50,000 FARO GAME HELD CAPONE'S JOB

Gang Leader Wanted to Get Mrs. Blackledge to Aid in Tax Quiz, Is Report.

LITSINGER LOST IN END

Chicago, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—The Daily News, printing what it described as the "inside story" of the Blackledge-Litsinger $50,000 faro game at Springfield, said today it was informed the swindle was backed by Capone interests.

The plotters, it was explained, hoped the internal revenue collector would "borrow" from her government funds, lose them and be placed in a position where "Scarface Al" Capone might demand of her consideration in the current investigation of his income taxes.

The underworld informer of the news named "Big" Perry and Roy Brouder as the confidence men. Brouder's photograph was said to have been identified, and the News said the pair had made Mrs. Blackledge's acquaintance as customers of her late husband's drug store. They took advantage of her financial straits after the death of her husband and son and her own illness to inveigle her into the faro game, the story ran.

Instead of Government funds, Edward E. Litsinger was the loser when he lent $50,000 to Mrs. Blackledge.

WEARY OF BEGGARS, AUTHOR LEWIS SAYS

Tells of German Gypsy Who Prays Something Will Happen to Him.

SKETCHING NEW NOVEL

London, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Sometimes Sinclair Lewis wonders whether he wasn't better off back in Sauk Center, Minn., before all this Nobel Prize business began.

"It's no bed of roses," he said today. "I'm still getting letters, and they all want money. I tell them I'm poor, too, but it doesn't do any good.

"There was a gypsy sent me a letter in Berlin asking me to pay off the mortgage on his old homestead, and when I said I couldn't do it he sent me five postal cards calling me some names I never heard of and saying he was praying every day at his mother's grave that something terrible should happen to me and my wife."

The critics back home don't bother him much, not even Billy Sunday, the evangelist, who, Lewis has been told, holds up the Nobel Prize winner as a horrible example in his radio talks.

"They tell me he said that if he had been God I never would have got to Stockholm," Lewis said, "I supposed all along that God knew best. But let them have their fun, they have so few other wholesome, manly pleasures."

The creator of Babbitt is not loafing while he is here, he said, but is sketching his next novel.

"What I'd like to do," he said, "is a life of Clarence Darrow. He's one of the finest fellows in the United States. But this novel will come first. It will be a long one, but I can't tell you about the plot. It's not going to be about preachers. I have said enough about preachers, and there are plenty of other things to write about."

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

It was inevitable, of course, that when those two great forces clashed headlong in the great food controversy that there had to be a few tragic figures left by the wayside when there came the resultant backing away.

That there would be this backing away no observer had the slightest doubt. Call it the law of gravity or something but it stood to reason that they could not stand there forever like two irremovable giant stones.

But the tragedy in it all is that in the backing away both sides can not move with the same concrete intactness with which they plunged headlong. Perhaps, though, it is the very force with which they collided that causes chips to break off and rest there beside the road as markers to the irrepressible pride of men.

Many little markers remain from the food clash, but a great big hunk symbolizes Minority Leader Tilson. That man is heartbroken, and a touching, tragic figure in his misery.

As late as 3 o'clock yesterday he was loudly and boldly proclaiming that there would be no compromise on the great principle and no subterfuge.

* * * *

Yet at about 5 o'clock there did come a compromise, a heap of compromise, and quite a bit of subterfuge. If it is admitted that the farmer may buy food with the loans which he is now to get, then there is some subterfuge in the careful avoidance of the word "food" in the bill, and certainly there is a compromise when the Democrats give up their plan for a $25,000,000 appropriation to the Red Cross, and get what they had been previously denied, $30,000,000 for loans to the farmers.

* * * *

It is not, however, the first time compromises were ever effected. Legislative historians have said that all legislation is a result of compromise.

Yet Mr. Tilson takes it as hard as if it meant his finish. One's heart went out to him as he stood with Speaker Longworth in the presence of a score of newspapermen. He was almost hysterical. The Speaker would begin an explanation of the agreement and Mr. Tilson would interrupt: "But it's no dole. Now, remember it's no dole." Excitedly, feverishly, he interrupted to say this time and again.

And there are others who still insist the agreement does not involve a compromise. Just why is more than we can see. Why doesn't Mr. Tilson simply say:

"Of course, it is a compromise. And we compromised simply because the Democrats were prepared to force an extra session and they had the votes with which to do it."

We've already forgotten about those no-compromise boasts he made.

ALEXANDRIANS VOTE TO PROBE SCHOOLS

Mass Meeting Decides to Form Committee to Look Into Conditions.

DISPUTE HELD HARMFUL

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A massmeeting of Alexandria citizens, called by the Alexandria Citizens Association, to consider the situation in the Alexandria public schools, was held in the auditorium of the Elks Home last night. About 300, representing nearly every civic and patriotic organization in the city, were present. Judg William S. Snow was chairman, and O. Ashby Reardon, secretary.

Lawrence Roland, president of the citizens association, offered a resolution which said that since the controversy over conditions in the schools is a menace to the efficiency and standing of the schools, the purpose of the meeting was to invite careful and considered action of the citizens, through their representatives, and concluded by urging the school board make a full, fair and impartial public investigation of any charge which might be made against any of the personnel of the schools, and that if such charges were found to be correct, to take such steps as may be necessary to secure the resignation of the superintendent of schools.

Substitute Offered.

Asubstitute resolution was offered by Robert S. Barrett, after a spirited defense of the Alexandria schools, to the effect that each of the organizations represented at the mass meeting appoint one representative to join with representatives from other bodies, to form an organization to investigate the school system.

This committee of representatives, to be known as the Alexandria citizens committee on public schools, is to conduct an investigation of the public school system, requesting the city school board and the city council to cooperate in the work. Any charges filed with the committee against any employe or official of the public schools would be looked into.

After considerable discussion, Mr. Bafrrett's resolution was adopted, 88 to 54, many declining to vote. The principal objection to Mr. Roland's resolution seemed to be that it provided for an investigation by the school board, and many felt that not only the superintendent of schools, R. C. Bowton, but the school board itself, is under fire.

The mass meeting was the outcome of a recent action of the School Board in requesting the release of Col. Clarence Deems, professor of military science and tactics in the Alexandria high schools. After violent protests made against the action of the board on the part of a large number of representatives of various organizations, headed by the American Legion, the board reversed its action and requested the retention of Col. Deems.

Protest Overruled.

Miss Helen Norris Cummings, president of the Cameron Club of Alexandria, protested the vote of a number of school teachers who were present, but her motion was overruled, the chairman saying there were not enough of their votes to affect the final outcome.

C. H. Strader, principal of the George Mason High School, offered a resolution that, instead of leaving the investigation to a committee of Alexandrians who, he believed, would be incapable of an impartial verdict, persons trained in such surveys be employed. Judge Snow, the presiding officer, took immediate exception to Mr. Strader's implication, as did Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce, acting, however, as he said, for himself as a citizen, rather than for any organization.

Mr. Strader hastened to explain he meant no reflection on the representatives who might be chosen, but that, after reading newspaper accounts of the recent controversy, Alexandrians interested in the schools could hardly help being influenced. His resolution failed for lack of a second.

Draft of Resolution Given. NN

Mr. Barrett's resolution follows:

Whereas, for some time disquieting rumors have been in circulation regarding the condition of the public school system of the City of Alexandria, and a mass meeting of the citizens of Alexandria having been called by a number of fraternal and civic organizations for the purpose of considering these reports and other matters concerning the public school system of Alexandria, Be it hereby

Resolved, That the representatives of the fraternal and civic organizations here represented report back to their respective bodies it is the sense of this meeting that they should each within ten days designate one representative from their respective bodies to join with representatives appointed from the other bodies to form an organization to be known as the Alexandria Citizens Committee on Public Schools. One Dies, 13 Saved In Blast on Boat

Ocala, Fla., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Thirteen persons were rescued and one drowned today after an explosion set fire to a glass bottom boat on Silver Springs, largest known springs in the world.

Rescuers who plunged into the water from boats and shore assisted those who could not swim to safety. J. A. Perkins, 65, Oak Park, Ill., lost his life when he jumped from a boat to aid his wife, who was struggling in the water.

Mrs. Perkins was in a hospital suffering from shock. Several persons were burned slightly, but no one was seriously injured.

Among the passengers were Miss Elizabeth Gibbs, Wheeling, W. Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Foreman, Pittsburgh, Pa.

me," Mr. Bartlett replied. "I didn't know they feared the situation."

He said his trip, made with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Schunaman, was "a business proposition" to arrange for condemnation of the commercial station and selection of a building site.

Mr. Bartlett told the committee, however, Postmaster General New who, he has testified, ordered the lease made, recommended the dismissal of Assistant District Attorney Fesler, who was investigating the lease.

New, Mr. Bartlett said, recommended Fesler's dismissal after he read the first grand jury report. The witness added this report was "pretty strong."

The name of Good, who later became Secretary of War, figured prominently in the testimony.

Mr. Bartlett said Good was in New's office when the Postmaster General called Barlett's assitant in and told him to execute the St. Paul lease and sign Bartlett's name.

The witness said he wrote to President Coolidge's secretary, Edward T. Clark, to deny responsibility for the lease.

IS KNOWN AS ANARCHIST

Rome, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Michele Schirru, a naturalized American citizen, born in Sardinia, must face trial before a special tribunal on a charge of planning to assassinate Premier Mussolini with a bomb. Under the law, he may be executed by being shot in the back.

Today the police gave out the gist of a confession they said Schirru had made yesterday in the hospital where he was taken after an unsuccessful attempt at suicide at the end of a battle in a police station. In the scuffle he wounded three policemen.

The reputed confession admitted there had been a plan for the assassination. Schirru said he had been an Anarchist for years and had been plotting against Mussolini since last summer. In a hotel where he lived police found two highly explosive bombs. They said Schirru had an American passport and had lived in New York and in Latin-America.

For a time, they said, he was correspondent for an Anarchist New York newspaper, called the Hammer.

The hotel where the bombs were found remained open today, largely through efforts of Theodore Jackel, the American Consul General, who pointed out there were several American guests in the place, one of them very old and the other very ill, who should not be compelled to move.

The police had ordered the place closed Tuesday night after Schirru's arrest as a penalty for failing to obtain proper identification from Schirru.

proceedings can be maintained under the code of the District of Columbia unless you or I authorize them.

Senate to Handle Case.

"The proper course, in my opinion, would be for you to lend your name to the institution of the quo warranto proceedings, but turn the preparation of the petition and the active conduct of the case and the presentation of the Senate side over to counsel employed by the Senate. Whre the law officers of a State are given control over quo warranto proceedings it is quite common for them to allow the use of their names in such proceedings to bring about the orderly decision of the disputed question of law, notwithstanding their views may be adverse to the petitioner.

"You can not be expected to take a position in court contrary to that taken by the head of the Department of Justice. I conceive it our duty to represent the executive side of this controversy and will arrange in due course to have counsel appear to sustain the appointment by the Chief Executive.

Allows Use of Name.

Mr. Rover's official statement follows:

"While I do not think it proper to appear as attorney for the Senate in the proposed quo warrnto proceedings, I m entirely willing to allow the use of my name as United States attorney, as the petitioner in the case, so the question may be properly presented to the court for determination. The papers will be prepared and the case presented to the court by special counsel to be employed by the Senate."

Under a decision of the United States Supreme Court, quo warrento proceedings can only be brought through the Attorney General or the United States attorney for the District of Columbia.

Mr. Rover's action was taken immediately after he received the Senate resolution, which was passed on Wednesday.

BONUS ENACTMENT PREDICTED IN 10 DAYS

Details of the compromise have not been worked out, but Representative Bacharach believed they could be completed promptly.

After conferring with Treasury officials, Bacharach said he believed the compromise plan could be financed by short-term Treasury certificates without resort to a bond issue.

The substitute plan tentatively proposed to increase the loan allowance to about 45 per cent. It would reduce interest to a uniform rate of approximately 4 per cent; require wives of applicants to participate in requests for the new advances and extend the new grants to all of the 3,500,000 veterans choosing to borrow.

Senate and House leaders agreed to expedite action on the proposal of the veterans' administrator, Hines, for a $10,000,000 hospital expansion program. Chairman Johnson, of the House veterans' committee, announced he would report it next Tuesday.

Another loan proposal was offered in a bill by Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York. This would authorize loans from $100 to $300 to veterans at 3 per cent interest, the funds to be used for any purpose, particularly to find employment.

Los Angeles and Ships Near Canal Zone's "War Sector"

U. S. S. Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (A.P.). The big dirigible Los Angeles, headed for Panama to engage in the naval war maneuvers there, at 3:40 o'clock this afternoon (E. S. T.) was at a point about 280 miles due south of Portland Point, JJamaica, and about 400 miles from the Panama Canal.

She was flying at a height of about 1,200 yards, and with her speed at 48 knots expected to overtake the United States scouting fleet at between 8 and 9 o'clock tonight.

The scouting fleet is due to arrive at Colon, Panama Canal Zone, early tomorrow.

U. S. S. Arkansas, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—The United States scouting fleet en route to Panama to engage in maneuvers and a mimic war was nearing Colon, Panama Canal Zone, tonight. The vessels slowed down somewhat so as to delay the arrival until after daylight tomorrow.

During the day the auxiliary vessels of the fleet proceeded direct, but the fighting vessels engaged in maneuvers. The destroyers operated apart to try out tactical formations while the cruisers maneuvered with the flagship Arkansas.

All the vessels today reported the absence of contagious diseases on board and the fleet will enter port tomorrow with a clean bill of health for all hands.

Officers and men were considerably interested to learn from Navy Department dispatches the battle fleet, a prospective opponent in the coming war game, left California ports yesterday for Pacama waters. The game is scheduled to begin next week.

Pitts Again Seeks Freedom on Bond

Appeal Goes to Appellate Division After Failing in District Court.

Continuing his efforts to obtain freedom pending action of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals on his appeal from a decision of District Supreme Court convicting him on a charge of conspiracy to embezzle $5,000,000 of the funds of the F. H. Smith Co., G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of the firm, yesterday petitioned the appellate court to admit him to bail.

The action, which was filed by Attorney T. Morris Wampler, follows action of Justice Frederick L. Siddons in twice denying bail for the former financier, on petitions for habeas corpus.

Government counsel are expected to file their answer to Mr. Wampler's petition by Monday.

Pitts is under sentence to serve fourteen years in jail. He was convicted jointly with C. Elbert Anadale, former vice president, and John H. Edwards, jr., former treasurer, both of whom have abandoned appeals.

THREE MORE NAMED TO BUTLER'S DEFENSE

nounced, made a profound apology to Mussolini.

Secretary Stimson, so the sponsors of this story say, has never quite forgiven the admirals who appeared before the Senate naval committee to fight the London naval treaty.

Until yesterday Gen. Butler had only one attorney—Maj. Henry Leonard, U. S. M. C., retired, his erstwhile comrade-in-arms, who lost an arm while fighting in the Boxer rebellion in China.

It was Maj. Leonard who last night announced that three additional attorneys had been retained. His statement follows:

"I have associated with me in the defense of Gen. Butler:

"Roland S. Morris, who is a member of the well-known firm of Duane, Morris & Heckscher, of Philadelphia, and vice chancellor of the law association. He has been active in public life and was formerly our ambassador to Japan. He also is professor of international law at the University of Pennsylvania and is engaged in active practice at the Philadelphia bar.

"Col. A. M. Hotding, who is the acknowledged leader of the bar in Chester County, home of Gen. Butler. He is president of the Chester County Bar Association. He is recognized in Pennsylvania as one of the outstanding trial lawyers of the State.

"Lieut. Col. Jesse F. Dyer also will be associated with the defense counsel."

It is presumed that former Ambassador Morris will be in command of the array of defense counsel when the court-martial opens in Philadelphia on February 16.

Meanwhile the charges that were delivered to Gen. Butler when he came here the other day remain a secret. Gen. Butler, through his counsel, left it up to the Navy Department as to whether the charges should or should not be made public.

The Navy Department promptly announced that it would keep the charges secret unless Gen. Butler specifically gave his consent to their publication. As a consequence, observers are now saying that Gen. Butler is afraid to have the charges made public.

TRADE BOARD DINNER TO HAVE AIR SETTING

GRAF ZEPPELIN IS SCENE

All the thrills of an actual trip in a giant airship will be experienced by 800 members of the Washington Board of Trade and their guests tonight when the annual midwinter dinner of the organization is held on the tenth floor of the Willard Hotel.

As a paradox, the board dinner is believed to be without parallel in the United States because it is held in the Nation's Capital, center of speech making, it is attended by some of the foremost speechmakers in the Nation, and yet speeches are barred from the program.

Starting at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, a corps of architects, carpenters, aviation experts, electricians, scene painters and sound reproduction mechanics began converting the large ballroom of the Willard into a reproduction of the Graf Zeppelin. They worked all last night and were expected to put the finishing touches on the job this afternoon in time for the start of the "flight" at 6:45 o'clock this evening.

At 6:30 o'clock a radio description of the approach of the Zeppelin, up to the time of its landing, will be broadcast through loudspeakers to the passengers, who will be waiting in an anteroom to the ballroom where the airship will be anchored. The passengers will then board the air liner. During the ensuing dinner a show will be presented by New York entertainers.

Honor guests will include the Ambassador to the United States from Italy, Nobile Giacomo de Martino; Gen. John J. Pershing, Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, members of the Senate and House, heads of Government departments and District officials.

Fred Smith is general chairman of the dinner; J. Mitchell Owen is in charge of decorations on the dirigible and Harry Helwig heads a committee responsible for the entertainment. George Plitt, president of the board, will preside.

285 Days Given Man As Policeman Testifies

Charles E. James, Negro, was sentenced yesterday by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court to serve a total of 285 days in jail.

The total sentence was meted out on charges of larceny of a pistol, carrying a deadly weapon and assault. James was arrested by Policeman John R. Leach, who testified that when he sought to investigate a struggle in the Negro's car the man tried to run him down. Assistant United States Attorney Wilbert McInerney appeared for the Government.

DEFENSE BY CANNON IS HEARD AT INQUIRY

plying their pulpits tomorrow, as all of them expected to be at home on Sunday.

Sober Faces Disappear.

Sober, long drawn, even sad faces have disappeared. Even the presiding bishops, Drs. Ainsworth and McMurray, came from the church after the evening session with animated countenances, and chatting, if not merrily, at least cheerfully with each other. When a newspaperman asked Bishop Ainsworth if he had cleaned up—meaning, of course, if the night session was over—the bishop met the inquiry with a jest.

As the twelve ministers came out, only one or two of them wore the cast of gravity. Most of them were like schoolboys let out to play. They seemed to experience a sense of deep relief over something. It could not have been any turn in the case; it could not have been that they were thinking at the moment of the case. Its gravity has been driven into their very souls. They know they are making history.

Another member of the committee has been identified. He is a Dr. Taylor. There are number of Methodist preachers named Taylor and probably several of them are doctors of divinity. He is best identified as Dr. Taylor.

May Submit Rebuttal.

There is a remote chance that Bishop Cannon may conclude his defense today, but that does not mean that the case will end with that. The prosecution may ask the privilege of putting in rebuttal testimony. It probably will. And then the record in the case has to be transcribed and read by each members of the investigation committee. If the official stenographers are keeping up with the day's proceedings, they may have this record complete within a few hours after the testimony closes. But even then, it may take two or three days for the committee to read the transcript. One report coming from the committee room was to the effect that this was mandatory. The committee, however, will probably be the judge of that.

This all presages the continuance of the case into next week. There will be no session tomorrow.

"Peter Ibbetson" to Be Sung.

New York, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—A "dream" of an opera—deems Taylor's "Peter Ibbetson"—will be presented to the world tomorrow in the glamorous setting of the Metropolitan Opera House. "Peter" will be Edward Johnson. Another American singer, Lawrance Tibbett, will play "Colonel Ibbetson."

Aided by high officers of the fleet, the opposition party endeavored to overthrow the Minseito (majority party) and thrust the Hamaguchi government out of office.

STIMSON CRITICIZES POLICIES OF WILSON

he said, "and in the departure taken by President Wilson in an attempt to force upon Mexico a policy which she resented, must be apparent to the most thoughtless student."

Secretary Stimson warmly defended and praised the American policy governing the exportation of arms and ammunition to countries engaged in civil war. It grew, he said, from a resolution adopted by Congress in 1922 providing the maintenance of "an embargo upon the exportation of all arms and munitions which might reach the rebels," but permitting their sale to the government whose power was threatened.

In the case of Brazil, where the government was overthrown shortly after the United States had agreed to ship it arms, Mr. Stimson said he had been "criticized for taking sides" in that civil srtife!"

No Necessity for Neutrality.

He maintained, however, there was no necessity of maintaining neutrality until the belligerency of the Brazilian rebels had been recognized either by this country or Brazil.

In a final argument for the upholding of a policy under which only the government in power should be supported, he said:

"I had little difficulty in reaching the conclusion that those who argued for the liberty of our munitions manufacturers to continue for profit a traffic which was staining with blood the soil of the Central American republics were not progressive in international law or practice."

FOURTEENTH STREET IMPROVEMENT PLAN GIVEN NEW IMPETUS

Crooked Highway Will Be Straightened to Avoid Traffic Snarls.

With the announcement of R. L. May that he would discontinue operation of the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Railway within the next few months, District engineers and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission are preparing to push forward the improvement of Fourteenth street, from Water street to Highway Bridge, it was said yesterday.

While no appropriation can be obtained for the project before the 1933 bill, preliminary plans will be drawn so that the work can start just as soon as the money is made available.

Not only will the now-crooked highway be straightened and repaved, but it will be raised so that an underpass may be constructed to replace the Potomac Park roadway that now crosses Fourteenth street just below the Tidal Basin Bridge.

Free Dirt Is Desired.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, chief engineer of the District Highway Department, is anxious to get the work far enough along so that free dirt may be obtained from the Treasury Department when excavations are made for the Mall Triangle building program. This will greatly curtail the expense, he said.

As the track space on the small bridge will be available to motorists, it is expected that the structure can be retained. From this there will be a gardual rise in the highway until it skirts the underpass, after which it will return to the level of Highway Bridge.

The underpass will eliminate one of the wrost traffic snarls in Potomac Park, it is pointed out. On Sundays, especially during the summer, traffic is often seriously tied up. Two or more park policemen are required to keep the motorists moving.

Traffic Snarls Unfortunate.

As the roadway is part of the main thoroughfare to the South, this slowing up of vehicles is considered particularly unfortunate.

This section of Fourteenth street has long been an eyesore to District and Federal officials. Under a plan drafted by the Park and Planning Commission some time ago, it was estimated that it would cost approximately $250,000 to improve the highway properly. District engineers, however, are confident that they can accomplish the job at a great deal less expense.

47 Midshipmen Dropped in Tests

Fewer Than in Former Years Fall Below Annapolis Standard.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Feb. 6.—Found below the required scholastic standard as a result of the midsemester tests recently concluded, 47 Midshipmen have been compelled to resign from the Naval Academy, it was announced today by officials of the institution. This is a somewhat smaller number than has been dropped in former years.

As usual, the largest number of delinquents was confined to the fourth, or lowest, class, in which there were 30. Fourteen were third class men, three of the second class. All seniors toed the scratch.

The showing is regarded as a good one, in view of the fact that there are nearly 2,000 students on the rolls.

port that we have returned to normal business conditions," Mr. Baltz announced.

Sees Returning Normalcy.

"This cooperation has been a source of constant inspiration to me and all those connected with the association during the past strenuous 48 hours we have experienced. We are grateful an dappreciative. We want to thank all of you who have helped.

"We believe that the abnormal conditions that have prevailed during the past two days, and the quick and effective return to normalcy have served not only to strengthen the public's confidence in our institution, but to allay any uneasiness that may have prevailed in financial circles in this community.

"It was not even necessary for the Perpetual to avail itself of the financial assistance so freely offered by Washington banks through their Clearing House Association. We expect to participate, during the coming months, in the gradual revival of business prosperity in the community, which we believe will soon become an assured fact."

Board Deposits $1,000.

At the same time the Washington Board of Trade announced that "it regrets the most uncalled-for situation which arose through the spreading of false rumors regarding the Perpetual Building Association."

"The board, from its surveys and from its contacts, has the utmost confidence in the soundness and stability of the financial institutions of the city, and urges all its members to suppress to the utmost all malicious and unfounded rumors and to assist the authorities in every way possible ot bring to light the source of any deliberate attempt to undermine the good name of Washington banks and financial institutions. As na evidence of the organization's faith in the Perpetual Building Association we are depositing $1,000 to that organization."

Accidental sounding of the burglar alarm at the Perpetual early yesterday morning sent squads of policemen to the scene, where investigation shewed that one of his heavily armed policemen on duty inside had tripped off the "burglar" wire.

DEFERRED PAYMENT SCHEME IS ALLEGED

WOMAN WINS DIVORCE

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4206.

Operation of an alleged deferred payment racket in Montgomery County was revealed yesterday by Sheriff Richard H. Lansdale, who is investigating the activities of two credit companies operating in the county.

The scheme is simplicity itself. An agent of the company visits a home-owner in the rural section and offers credit of from two to three years for the installation of electric lighting or for a new roof. The work is to be paid for in small payments. A contract is provided, which later turns out to be a confessed judgment note, payable on demand, and is duly filled out. The note is then sold to a credit company in another city. A small down payment usually is required at the time of the sale.

More than a dozen such notes have been mailed to Sheriff Lansdale for collection since he took office the first week in January. Most of the persons affected are in such a position that it means great hardship to pay the notes, he said. Following a conference with State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, the sheriff said he could do nothing but serve the necessary papers. The only recourse the victims have is to file suit, and with little likelihood of success.

One motion for arrest of judgment has been filed in such a case by Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, Rockville attorney, and will be given a hearing before Judge Robert B. Peter within a short time.

Sheriff Lansdale and State's Attorney Prescott are conducing an investigation into the operations and have issued a warning to all residents to investigate before signing notes in such cases. The chambers of commerce of the county are to be asked to cooperate in warning residents, especially in the rural sections.

Lacy Shaw, president of the Montgomrey County Commissioners, yesterday tacitly approved the plan for a county board of health proposed by the committee on sanitation and public health of the Montgomery County Civic Federation. The report of the commtitee will be presented to the federation at its meeting Monday night in the Bethesda School. Copies were issued to county officials and interested citizens several days ago for study.

Commissioner Shaw said that he believed the plan presented a worthwhile effort to provide an efficient health department without material increase in maintenance costs.

Extension of Detrich avenue in Kensington for a distance on one block to Baltimore street so that readier access may be had to Kensington School, which has been submitted to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission by the town of Kensington has been referred to the Montgomery County members of the commission.

The plans specify a 50-foot street. Plans for widening the intersection of Connecticut avenue and Howard avenue by rounding off the southeast corner also were presented. The work is to be paid for by the Standard Oil Co., which has a station at the intersection.

Theft of three almost new tires from the machine of Miss L. Maude Boynton, 4502 Stanford street, Chevy Chase, by a thoughtful thief, who replaced the stolen tires with nearly worn-out ones, was reported to Bethesda police yesterday. Neighbors saw the man at work, but paid no attention to the commonplace sight of a motorist changing tires.

A decree of absolute divorce from Howard T. Downs, of Laurel, Md., was awarded Mrs. Bessie M. Downs, of Spencerville, yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter in circuit court at Rockville. The divorce was granted on grounds of desertion. Custody of the two children and alimony was awarded the wife, who is represented by Attorney P. Barnard Walsh, of Rockville.

The couple was married at Rockville August 24, 1920, according to the petition.

The campaign for drought-relief funds being carried on by the Red Cross in the county appears to be drawing to a successful conclusion, according to P. Barnard Welsh, general chairman. Most of the districts report that they are nearing their quotas, and it appears that the county will oversubscribe its quota of $3,600.

Although scheduled to close today, the campaign probably will be extended for several days in order to permit late subscriptions. An oversubscription by county residents will be a deciding factor when relief needs for the county are presented to the Red Cross.

Four Towns' Firemen Called to Quell Blaze

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 6.—Firefighters from four Shenandoah County towns were called to Conicville, a hamlet in the mountains about 10 miles west of Mount Jackson, tonight to battle a blaze which it was feared would raze the settlement.

The fire was confined to two barns owned by C. M. Newland and Isaac Heishman and the adjacent outbuildings. Nearby dwellings were saved. A chimney spark is blamed for the blaze. No estimate of loss was available.

TESTS ANNOUNCED FOR AUTO OWNERS

Garages Equipped to Make Arlington Inspections Are Listed.

SCOUTS PLAN PAGEANT

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Carrying out its policy to further safeguard motorists, the Virginia Motor Vehicle Commission announces plans for inspection of all lights, brakes and steering gear in Arlington County has been completed. The following garages possess equipment according to the commission, to make tests: The Greenwood Garage, Lee Heights on the Lee Highway, route No. 211; Bauserman Motor Co., Columbia Pike, Arlington; Alcova Motor Co., Columbia Pike, Arlington, and Heitt Service Station, at East Falls Church. Other stations will be announced as soon as they are fully equipped to make the necessary tests.

The State police have instructions to make a check on all cars to see that the motor law is complied with.

The Arlington County Ministerial Union at its meeting yesterday at the Clarendon Baptist Church endorsed the action taken by the Arlington County Civic Federation in appointing a special committee to formulate plans for a Community Chest for the year 1932.

The union recommends that all churches in the county hold a personal visitation week prior to the Eastern season.

The Rev. Elmer Lucas, pastor of the United Baptist Church, of Cherrydale, president, presided.

In carrying out the program for the beautification of highways in Arlington County, inaugurated by J. P. Neal, Virginia State highway landscape engineer, at a recent meeting held in the county, the Hume School and Civic League at its meeting held last night voted to take over one mile of Mount Vernon avenue for beautification in time for the George Washington bicentennial celebration next year.

No definite steps toward the work will be taken, however, until an attempt has been made to have sidewalks laid on each side of the avenue and the program has been presented to engineer Neal.

The question of sidewalks will be presented to the board of supervisors and an effort will be made to have the board bear one-half the expense of putting in the sidewalk along the entire stretch of road along Arlington Ridge. It was pointed out that this section is well built up and since the repaving of Mount Vernon avenue last year, the road is too heavily traveled for the safety of pedestrians to use the roadway for a sidewalk.

The school committee, Mrs. Marshall Wright, chairman, strongly recommended that a policeman be stationed at the Hume School during the morning, noon and evening periods. This matter will be discussed with Sheriff Howard B. Fields. Owing to the large number of schools located on the highways, Sheriff Fields is now short of men, but the committee takes the view that it will be better for the safety of the children to take an officer from one of the other school buildings.

The pageant will be directed by its author, Commodore Longfellow, of the American Red Cross. It will depict the life of the first President of the United States from the age of 1 year on. This is being presented as a part of a national celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of the establishment of Boy Scouts in America, and the troops of Arlington County and the City of Alexandria will take the part of Morgan's Virginia Riflemen in the Revolutionary War. The program will start at 8 o'clock.

KENSINGTON SEEKS PASSENGER DEPOT

Board of Trade Also Asks Change in Delivery of Rural Mail.

SCHOOL HEARING IS SET

Establishment of a North Washington passenger station at Kensington, to serve the passengers of Northwest Washington and suburban Montgomery County, was proposed in a resolution adopted last night by the eKnsington Board of Trade, meeting in the eKnsington National Guard Armory.

A committee composed of Dr. Eugene Jones, J. Scrivener, Wilson L. Townsend, J. T. Williams, and Russell Mizell was appointed by K. W. Simpson, president, to further the proposal. The resolution points out that Connecticut avenue is the main artery of traffic from the White House through Washington and Montgomery County, and connects with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Kensington.

Ask Rural Route Change.

Through the existing system of connecting highways, it was claimed, Kensington is closer in actual mileage than Union Station in Washington to much of Northwest Washington and its suburbs.

The board adopted a resulution urging that rural mail routes in the vicinity of eKnsington originate at Kensington postoffice instead of Rockville, Chevy Chase and Silver Spring, as at present. The present system causes delays in the receipt of mail by Kensington business men, the resolution declared.

More representative listing of Kensington business enterprises in its classified business directory will be sought from the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. A campaign to double the present membership of 49 is to be instituted by the board.

To Study School Plan.

William F. Walker, chairman of the committee on schools, reported that Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome had advised him that the Board of Education will consider the ples of the board for the establishment of a central high school at Kensington at its meeting Tuesday.

Matthew Trimble, chairman of a special committee, reported that the State Roads Commission has notified him it is willing to consider straightening Connecticut avenue and widening the bridge over Rock Creek, but that widening of the avenue from Chevy Chase Lake to Kensington is not on this year's program.

Ralph Hendricks, chairman of a special committee, reported that the Kensington town council had pledged cooperation with the board. It was voted to ask for membership in the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Judge Hitt, after the jury returned its verdict yesterday, told Attorney Mullen that Howell's probation on a previous charge of a similar nature would be continued.

DENISON REQUESTS RUM CASE MANDATE

EAGER TO PUSH TRIAL

Desiring to have a speedy trial on charges of violating the prohibition law, as contained in an indictment naming him, Representative Edward E. Denison (Republican), Illinois, asked the District Court of Appeals yesterday to hand down a mandate upholding the validity of the indictment without further delay.

The request was granted and Attorney William E. Leahy obtained leave of District Supreme Court to file application for a bill of particulars. The attorney wants to know the exact place where the liquor is supposed to have been possessed, the quantity, type of containers and how and in what manner the alleged liquor was obtained.

Denison is accused of having had a trunk of liquor in his office at the House Office Building. His attorneys had the indictment quashed on a demurrer on the plea that it was not sufficiently specific. The Government appealed and the appellate court, in an opinion rendered Monday, held the indictment was perfectly good and that the attorneys for the defendant could obtain a bill of particulars, which tantamountly amounts to a specific indictment.

Denison is represented also by Attorneys E. Hilton Jackson and Everett Sanders.

DR. HARNED'S CHOIR TO SING ON TUESDAY

Will Have Part in Concert to Be Given by Presbyterian Men's Club.

CITY PASTORS INVITED

How much do people who go to church Sunday after Sunday and sing hymns of prayer and hymns of praise and hymns of all sorts, know about music?

This is a question that has bothered pastors who have a musical knowledge and, naturally, choir directors. The minister preaches on themes that are related in some way to the great canticles of the church; the congregation lifts its voice in songs of adoration or devotion, and the choir sings great anthems or oratories, or some of the immortal chants into which the musical geniuses of the ages have put their souls. In this program the choir has the center of the stage. More and more religious groups are leaving their musical worship to these singers. This has led to an interesting situation.

Out of such a situation a noted choir director of Washington, Dr. Alfred W. Harned, has begun what promises to stimulate interest in the ministry of music. With his big National Capital Choir he will appear before the Men's Club of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church Tuesday evening as the stellar part of a season of fine events the club has given for its members, members of the congregation and their friends.

Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, president of the Men's Club, has invited the Presbyterian ministers of Washington and their choirs.

A program of variety and interest has been prepared. Dr. Harned will have most of the evening for his part, but the club also has a share, and the two parts will blend very well, Gen. Ireland says.

The entertainment is not restricted to those who have had a special invitation. The club extends a general invitation to the community.

LINCOLN SERVICES TO BE CONDUCTED

Veterans on Program in Church Where President Worshipped.

ANECDOTE IS NARRATED

Thursday of next week will be celebrated as the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. It so happens that this is also the night set apart for the midweek prayer service in Washington. In commemoration of the birthday, a Lincoln service will be conducted at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, where Lincoln worshipped during the Civil War.

Dr. R. R. Gurley, the war-time pastor of this church, was an intimate friend of Mr. Lincoln. One of the incidents connected with that intimacy was told long after Lincoln's death by two of Dr. Gurley's sons, who said that one night, during the intensest moment of the war period, they discovered Mr. Lincoln alone, praying in one of the rooms in the basement of the church, while their father was conducting prayer service in an adjacent room.

In that room now is a silver plate labeled: "Lincoln Room." The Lincoln pew upstairs is marked and roped off.

It is understood a plan is under way to make the church a memorial to Lincoln, to bear his name probably, and to be a sort of national shrine.

At the memorial service, Clifford K. Berryman will give a chalk talk, dealing with outstanding figures in the political life of the Nation. He will also make several sketches of Lincoln and of those who were associated with him at Washington.

Later in the evening the services will be turned over to the American Legion, the Foreign Legion and other patriotic societies, who have sent invitations to their members.

Sentence Sermons

By the REV. ROBERT LOUIS WOOD
(Pastor of Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church.)

The Broken Altars of Life

And he repaired the altars of the Lord that were broken down."
I Kings, 18:30.

AN altar is an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual reality. It represents the outreach of the human soul, a cry of the heart, a thirst of the spirit. We do not erect a church of stone and mortar till the Church is first built within our own souls. Nor do we kneel at the altar within the church till we have a holy of holies in the secret place of life.

Therefore, a broken altar is a spiritual tragedy. It represents the collapse of an ideal, the broken health of a faith once exultant and glorious, and the death of the aspiration that built the altar. This broken altar tells eloquently of the spiritual dearth that had come to the people who once worshiped at this shrine.

This age, indifferent to spiritual things, thoughtless about religion, has many broken altars. The man or the woman who neglects the public service of the Church has first allowed the altar of his own heart to fall into a state of decay. When our lips have no song of praise it is evidence that there is no joy and gladness within our souls that must express itself in words.

It is gloriously fine to rebuild an altar. Don't let that altar remain in broken hopelessness. Find again the secret place of prayer. Join those who seek the quiet of an hour of worship on the Lord's Day. Lift your voice once more in a great song of praise and thanksgiving.

Rebuild the altar of your life that is broken down.

NATIONAL CHURCH PLANS MOVE AHEAD

Presbyterians to Receive Report of Commission Wednesday.

VARIOUS SUMS ON HAND

A forward step in the move to build a great Presbyterian Cathedral here, to be known as the National Presbyterian Church, will be taken Wednesday evening at a meeting in the Chapel of the Covenant—First Presbyterian Church. The committee on program and finance of the National Capital Presbyterian commission will meet with the ministers and sessions of the presbytery to discuss plans for financing the proposed cathedral, to hear the commission's report, and to answer questions.

The commission is composed of Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, Fred B. Shipp, Charles A. Douglas, Dr. Charles Wood and Richard P. Ernst.

Moneys in Hand.

Matters have progressed thus far with the enterprise: Plans for raising the money have been laid. The general assembly has pledged itself to raise so much. Before the collectors begin their campaign, a definite sum must be raised by the Covenant—First Presbyterian Church, which is the foundation for the National Presbyterian Church.

In hand are these sums and properties: $125,000, which the Federal Government paid for the old First Presbyterian Church property on Four-and-a-half street; $425,000, which Dr. Charles Wood holds in trust for an anonymous donor, and the property of the Church of the Covenant on Connecticut avenue, variously estimated up to $750,000. This valuable plot of ground probably will not be sold until the market is in a more seasonable condition.

Merger Planned.

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, minister of the Church of the Covenant, is chairman of the National Capital Presbyterian Commission; Dr. Charles Wood, vice chairman, and the Rev. Godfrey Chobot, minister of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, secretary.

There is another organization that has an important part to play in this enterprise—the National Presbyterian Church, a chartered institution. Dr. John C. Palmer, minister of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, is chairman of the board of trustees of this church.

When the money for the cathedral is raised, the plan is for the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church to make a contract with the National Presbyterian Church by which one will be merged into the other and then the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will have a new home and a new name.

NO FEDERAL DOLE.

The "compromise" reached by Senate and House conferees, if it should be approved by President Hoover, is a victory for the President and a defeat for the Democrats and insurgents who demanded a Federal dole. The tentative agreement provides for additional loans to farmers in the drought regions, but these loans are to be made a lien upon crops or other security. The Treasury is protected against a raid in the name of charity.

After the Senate Democrats had heard from John J. Raskob they quickly abandoned their threat of forcing an extra session. The speech of Senator Harrison sounded the new keynote of "compromise," in the hope of saving the face of the Democrats who had demanded a Federal dole, not only for drought sufferers but for the unemployed.

There is no provision in the proposed agreement for loans or dole to the unemployed. The arrangement applies solely to drought victims, and it is not a dole but a loan.

Senator Borah's spectacular avowal of a readiness to filibuster for a dole, after he had announced that he would not participate in a filibuster, turns out to be, in the eloquent words of Senator Walsh, an "empty gesture." The senator from Idaho was inconsistent for nothing. He is still in favor of an extra session, no doubt, but from present prospects the appeal for relief of starving drought victims will not furnish an excuse for filibustering.

So long as the Treasury is protected against a Federal dole there is no apparent reason why President Hoover should find fault with an arrangement whereby the coalition in the Senate can abandon its untenable position under the smoke-screen of an increased appropriation for loans to the drought-stricken farmers. The coalition was compelled to do something, and do it quickly, after it made the blunder of threatening an extra session as the alternative of a dole. Countrywide protests poured in, from Democrats as well as Republicans, and the gentlemen who are really in control of the Democratic party promptly forced members of that party to seek a way out of their dilemma.

Firmness in opposing the imposition of the dole system upon the United States has won a victory for the House and the President.

Whatever the exact text of the proposed agreement may be, it will not contain provision for public charity or a dole to the unemployed. The public does not have any objection whatever to the granting of liberal loans to the drought-stricken farmers, and probably President Hoover would approve of such legislation.

PROTECTING SMALL BORROWERS.

The Senate District committee has made an agreeable compromise on the question of interest charges on small loans in Washington. It reported favorably on both the small loan bill and the credit union bill.

Legislation on this subject is urgent. At present the law does not allow a sufficient interest charge on small loans to attract capital into that business. As a result the people are victimized by unregulated loan sharks who charge outrageous interest rates.

Opinion seems to have been divided on the two measures before the Senate. Advocates of the small loan bill, which would legalize interest as high as 3 per cent per month and institute strict regulations for the small loan business, contend that a lower rate will not attract reliable firms into this field of finance. It is better to allow reputable firms to charge that rate than to leave the people of Washington without small loan facilities and therefore at the mercy of loan sharks.

On the other hand, advocates of the Capper credit unions bill hope to establish an improved method of securing small loans through cooperative financial groups. The operation of this plan would not interfere with legitimate small loan establishments, since it would offer credit on a different basis. If the Capper plan should prove successful, lending firms would be compelled to compete with cooperative associations, and their rates would have to be attractive to secure patronage. But whether or not credit unions are formed, the provisions of the small-loan bill should protect residents of the District from extortion.

Apparently the interests of the people can be best served by enactment of both of these measures into law.

VETERANS' DISABILITY PAY.

Senator Reed points out that a number of employes of the Veterans' Bureau who are drawing large salaries continue to draw compensation as disabled officers. The public will probably conclude with Senator Reed that in some cases the diagnosis on which these allowances are made have been too liberal. But it is difficult to follow the senator when he declares that this situation constitutes a "widespread scandal."

It is well known that many veterans who were disabled in the war are drawing large salaries both in and out of the Government service. Thirty or even 50 per cent disability does not prevent all former soldiers from making a living. Some men were so wrecked by their war service that they never will be able to resume their former occupations. But even these veterans often fit into new occupations and enlarge their earning capacity. Yet their experience in the trenches may subtract many years from their lives.

Is the disability allowance intended to save veterans from starvation, or to compensate them in some measure for the physical handicaps that were inflicted on them in the service? If the former theory is adopted Congress ought to take away the allowance to all veterans with good jobs and not merely from those holding Government positions. On the other hand, if this disability allowance is given in compensation for damage done to health and physique during the war there seems to be no reason why it should be denied to employes of the Veterans' Bureau or any other Government agency.

The whole question of disability pay needs looking into. Gen. Hines testified before the Senate finance committee that some former service men are wasting away their lives in soldiers' homes because the Government pays them a considerable disability fee, while all their physical wants are supplied by the homes. The tendency is to encourage veterans to spend the remainder of their lives loafing at the Government's expense. For this reason Gen. Hines recommended that the allowance be reduced when the recipient is being cared for by a veteran's hospital or a soldiers' home.

The question needs careful consideration, however, and hasty legislation would be most inadvisable. It has so many ramifications that there is danger of doing a grave injustice to some classes of veterans if piecemeal legislation is enacted. Congress would do well to study the whole subject during the coming recess.

TARIFF READJUSTMENTS.

The prompt action of the Tariff Commission and of President Hoover in ironing out the inequalities of the Smoot-Hawley act is gratifying. Never before has the commission operated with such promptitude and unanimity. The new commission was organized less than five months ago. Yet it has completed seven distinct investigations, involving fourteen different commodities, and sent the reports to the President.

Most significant among the changes that have been brought about by the new commission seems to be the elimination of friction. All seven reports were unanimous, although the commission is bipartisan. Apparently politics has been subordinated to economics in determining what rate changes ought to be made. President Hoover was careful to appoint a majority of experienced economists to the commission. The partisan feuds which have interfered with deliberations of the commission for many years seem to have passed out of the picture.

Improved methods of procedure account, in part, for the expedition of these reports. Invoice prices were used where it was impractical to secure data as to foreign costs. Hearings have been speeded up and short cuts have been made wherever possible. In addition to the completed investigations the commission has been working on all of the 35 reports called for by Congress. Hearings have been held on some of these and additional reports may be expected in the near future.

President Hoover manifested his confidence in the good judgment of the commission by immediately proclaiming the new duties recommended. Mr. Hoover's reason for demanding the maintenance of a strong Tariff Commission was to eliminate inequalities in the existing law and to protect American industry against changing conditions of foreign competition. The commission has demonstrated its capacity to carry out these purposes.

The fact that the commission recommended five reductions and only one increase is inconsequential. The commission can not weaken the protective policy which has been adopted by Congress. When rates are found to be higher than is necessary to protect American industry they ought to be lowered in the interest of the consuming public. It is the duty of the commission to administer, and not to change, the protective policy adopted by Congress.

It is interesting to speculate on what would have happened if the coalition in the Senate had been able to write its own "flexible provision" into the Smoot-Hawley act. The reports of the Tariff Commission would have been dumped into the legislative cauldron, which is seething with controversies over drought relief, soldiers' bonus, appropriation bills and dozens of other subjects. What excellent material for a filibuster! What an opportunity for the rabid insurgents to force an extra session to consider these and "other" changes in the tariff! Convalescent business would have suffered a severe relapse. Democrats and even insurgent Republicans must acknowledge that the provision in the Smoot-Hawley law relating to readjustments by the President upon recommendation of the Tariff Commission is a wise and practical procedure.

BASEBALL WAR!

A few years ago the moguls of organized baseball in an effort to improve the game from the spectators' viewpoint, approved a livelier ball. The epidemic of home runs of the last two or three seasons was the result. At first the fans liked the newer, faster game, but there came a reaction from superfans. The fine points had been taken from baseball, in the opinion of the wise students of popular appeal. Baseball games had become pitcher-batter duels, instead of team contests. The criticism has taken effect, and the two major leagues now announce that a new ball will be used in the 1931 season.

The National League has approved a heavier horsehide covering, with raised, heavier stitching. The American League has not altered the covering, but has replaced the countersunken, light stitching with raised, heavier cord. This stitching will offer resistance to the air, thus cutting down the flight of the ball. Moreover, it will give pitchers something to fasten their fingers upon, enabling them to improve their control and increase their "steam."

The effect of the innovation will be apparent early in the new season. Many fans are pleased that steps have been taken to tame the "jack-rabbit" ball. Others violently protest. This is as it should be in a free country.

Spring is just around the corner when fans begin to issue ultimatums and league dictators announce their irresistible decrees.

PROTECTION FOR OIL

By ARTHUR CAPPER, Senator From Kansas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Very frankly, I was much disappointed in the editorial in The Post this morning entitled, "Oil Lobby's Futile Move."

The position taken, to my mind, is contrary to the general policy of The Post, which I have observed is consistently in favor of the protection of American industry and American labor from importations of cheaply produced foreign commodities.

Unrestricted importation of crude petroleum and refined petroleum products from Venezuela and other Southern points today are threatening the very existence of the domestic oil industry.

Thousands of small wells in Kansas and Oklahoma are shut down. Similar conditions face oil producers of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and other States with settled production. When these small independent wells are closed down they are closed for good. Their production is lost forever.

The measure which I introduced and which the Senate committee on commerce has reported favorably, by a vote of nine to six, has two main purposes.

First—To afford protection to the independent operators in an American industry against free importations of cheap foreign monopoly produced oil; to afford protection also to hundreds of thousands of American laborers employed in that industry.

Second—To make possible true conservation of the oil reserves of the United States. I am using in this connection the definition of Mr. Mark L. Requa, recent chairman of the Federal and State Oil Conservation Congress:

"It (conservation) is not the hoarding nor locking up of our national resources but is rather their wise use, and it implies not merely their preservation against waste but also a wise and equitable exhaustion with the maximum of efficiency. Conservation, therefore, takes cognizance of balanced and intelligent production, manufacture, distribution and use, and aims to bring about the greatest good to the greatest number and that for the longest period of time."

Furthermore, in his statement before the commerce committee, Mr. Requa said this: "It is obvious that the pinching-in restriction of American production should not continue with an unlimited importation of foreign oils."

These two statements bring to us a vivid picture of the situation today.

Through proration in the flush oil States the American oil industry is limiting production, conserving the national oil reserves. Domestic production was approximately 100,000,000 barrels less in 1930 than in 1928.

But that reduction in domestic production has been more than offset by importations of cheap foreign oil.

In 1930 these importations amounted to 105,000,000 barrels, some 62,000,000 of crude and 43,000,000 of refined products—the equivalent of approximately 120,000,000 barrels of crude oil. This is nearly one-sixth of the total domestic production for 1930.

This imported petroleum and products practically monopolizes the market, certainly sets the market price for the industrial section of the United States along the Atlantic Seaboard and for miles and miles inland. In fact it sets the market price of crude oil for the entire domestic market.

It displaces the Texas and California oil from the domestic market to which it is entitled, if there is anything at all to our theory of protection. That throws the Texas and California oil into ruinous competition with the midcontinent field—all because of this unlimited importation of petroleum from the cheaply producing fields of South America.

If the American independent oil producers are afforded protection by limitation, by embargo, or by a tariff, the industry will continue to prorate production to the demands of the domestic market; it can operate at a reasonable profit and give employment to hundreds of thousands of American workmen who buy the products of the industrial section of the United States. This intelligent proration will conserve the oil reserves of the Nation, through orderly and limited production.

Without some limitation, or embargo, or tariff on importations, the owners of the big flush wells, I am afraid, will break proration agreements, and produce all the oil they can as soon as they can, taking whatever they get. This is not conservation. The owners of the little one-to-three-barrels-a-day well will shut in their wells, and this production will be lost forever. That is not conservation.

As a protectionist, I believe in protecting the American oil industry against cheap foreign oil.

As a conservationist, I believe in protecting the domestic oil industry to the extent where we will have balanced and intelligent production, getting the maximum use and retaining the maximum conservation of our oil reserves.

As a citizen of the United States, I believe in giving first call to American industry and American labor in the oil industry, as well as in all industry.

The measure which bears my name, limiting imports of crude to 16,000,000 barrels a year and prohibiting the importation of refined petroleum products, will not solve the big problem of the oil industry. But it will afford the protection to which the industry is entitled, will keep that industry alive, will give employment to more than 100,000 American laborers now out of work, and give us a three-year breathing spell in which to work out the national oil conservation policy without ruining the independent oil producers.

These are my reasons for sponsoring and supporting the measure.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

FOR THE DAY.

This let me be to the end of the day:
As willing to work as I'm willing to play,
Eager to triumph but willing to take
The blows of the battle for victory's sake,
Let me be friendly and let me be fair,
Asking no more than I'm willing to spare.

Here's how I'd live to the end of the day:
Strong for the duties that fall in my way;
Ready to labor, full muscled and fit,
But still in good humor to chuckle a bit.
Let me be sensible, trudging the street,
Give me good heart for whatever I meet.

Lord, give me courage and pity and mirth
And all that is needful to live upon earth;
Let me with tolerance honor all creeds,
Let me remember that every path leads
Somebody homeward to peace and to rest,
Grant me the wisdom to live to my best.

Speaking of the Unemployed.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE: Your suggestion that you be permitted to quit school and get your education by reading books of my selection would be a dandy except for two things.

The first is that the scheme wouldn't work, and the second is that it might ruin you if it did work.

Getting an education by reading good books at home reminds me of what Theodore Roosevelt said about worship. He said it was quite true that a man could worship God in the forests and fields quite as well as he could by going to church, but he wouldn't do it.

One man in a thousand, denied a formal education, has such a consuming thirst for knowledge that he reads day and night and eventually absorbs more learning than any school could give him. Edison is an example.

But such men don't read as a matter of duty. They don't get through a book the easiest way, mumbling the big words and skipping the dull parts. They have a passion for facts. They absorb what they read. And no man can get an education in that way unless he is driven by a similar passion for facts.

You have no great thirst for knowledge—no more than any other normal girl has.

You thirst for life. You are much more interested in frocks and parties than you are in the epoch-making theories of Einstein. And since you aren't a high-brow genius, willing to sacrifice everything for knowledge, your one chance to get an education is to accept the sugar-coated kind—to get a little of it a little at a time in a school where social life makes it palatable and self-respect prompts you to play the game and keep up with the others.

Boys and girls who have private tutors—and that is what your suggestion calls for—are unfitted for life in a democratic country. They lose touch with the world. They become self-centered. They either despise the world or fear it, and in either case they are considered "queer" and aren't invited to join in the game.

You must live with people and depend on them for your happiness; and the more you mingle with them while you are young, the better your chance to win their good opinion and reconcile yourself to their faults in years to come.

Education doesn't all come from books. Rubbing elbows with your own kind will teach you many things never found in print. Just be patient, dear, and live one day at a time. And don't make your medicine bitter by thinking about it too much. Love,

DAD.

PRO AND CON

Thanks to the House.

Boston Transcript.

If the Senate Democrats can force an extra session upon no better issue than the proposed destruction of the American Red Cross "by means of a Federal dole," as Representative Tilson puts it, the chances of their party gaining favor with the country are very thin. They are desperate for "issues," that magic entity which is supposed to be all-powerful in political campaigns, and they overlook the fact that in selecting their standard bearers the people usually prefer to take demonstrated capacity along with such issues as the candidates may represent. But political wisdom is not evident in the determination of the Senate Democracy to sidetrack even the appropriation bills to carry a stubborn point and to scuttle the most efficient relief organization in the history of the world. Mr. Tilson, the Republican House leader, will have the backing of the people in announcing that the House will not yield to the Senate on this issue, that the integrity of the Red Cross must remain unimpaired and that even the threat of an extra session will not cause the House to falter in staving off a Socialistic and unnecessary dole.

Senate Overstepping Authority.

It seems clear that when the Senate seeks to recall its confirmation of a public official after he has taken office it is overstepping its authority and attempting to usurp the power of the executive department.

Considering the distaste with which people all over the country regard an extra session, it is amazing that some of those fellows in Washington would risk their notorious popularity so far as to try to pull off one.

Senators "Amazed."

New York Times.

In his remarks on this subject (an extra session) Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, betrayed a mental amazement, or confusion, not unlike that of Senator Borah. Both of them expressed a pathetic kind of wonder why the country did not desire to have the Senate continually in session, devising infallible measures for the benefit of all the people. Mr. Harrison stood as one dazed before the evidence that manufacturing concerns and business interests are actually "terrified" at the suggestion that the new Congress be called in extraordinary session. Senators and many representatives are so assured of their own benevolence and wisdom that they can not understand how captains of industry and financial leaders should dread their sitting overtime at Washington in order to solve, by happy-thought laws, all the ills of this Nation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Now That Prof. Einstein Withdraws One Theory, May He Not Admit His Mistake in Advocating Pacifism?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with mixed emotion that I noted in this morning's Post the news that Prof. Einstein has abandoned his theory of relativity.

Is this not another count against those who think this world is getting worse? It brings to my mind the story of the ancient king for whom a tailor agreed to make a magic suit that could be seen only by those with pure hearts. The properties of the new clothing having been well advertised, the king, au naturel, rode forth to receive the praise of the people for his beautiful new suit. All were extravagant in their expression of wonder that anything so beautiful could be made, until a child called to its mother.

The king was a good sport, saw the point, and asked the people to join with him in a resolution to be more honest.

I have heard it said that only seven men claimed to understand Dr. Einstein's theory, and, while we can not doubt the honesty of the eminent scientist and the seven who thought they understood him, we may be sure that the other 119,999,993 of us, had we been no better than those who admired the beautiful new garments of the king, would have claimed that we, also, understood.

Does this unmistakable proof of Dr. Einstein's sincerity and good faith warrant us in hoping that he will now admit that his recent statements against patriotism and the duty of a citizen to defend his country were only the random words of a great man, engrossed with, to him, greater problems, uttered in an effort to say something that common people could understand? It is quite evident that Dr. Einstein is a great leader in his chosen field. It is easy to see how this world may be only a speck of dust in the mighty cosmology of his superb intellect, but to us of the earth, earthy, it is a speck of vital importance. Does it not seem a little unfair for him, even as a favor to a clamorous multitude, to turn from the subject to which he has given the best part of his life and to confuse the unwary by giving advice on a subject which he, obviously, has not studied at all?

When I see a great scientist, like Bertrand Russell, prostituting his natural gifts by neglecting the field in which he is an undoubted leader to advise mothers how to raise their children and then attempt to bring about their enslavement by a policy of non-resistance to evil and their ultimate destruction in the vortex of free-love, I feel ashamed that I belong to the human race.

When I see a great man be using the influence his eminence in one field has given him to mislead men in other fields, I wonder why it is that success in one line, important or otherwise, seems to convince a man that he has qualified to advise all men on all questions.

FRANK MOORMAN.

Drop in Silver Demoralizes Half of the World's Population.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of the day before and your quotation of John Brisben Walker's article from the New York Times, on February 5, your valuable publication is waking up to the true situation as to the cause of the world depression.

Mr. Darling, internationally known financier, a director of the great Midland Bank of London, who recently testified before a committee of Congress, is reported as saying that the world's financial and economic crisis is very largely due to the fact that one-half of the world is unable to buy what the other half has to sell because "a large part of their money, which for centuries has been silver, has been fleched from them." This refers, of course, to the great masses in China and India, whose silver money has been rendered almost worthless, and this revives the half-century-old money question.

The writer remembers the late Senator Beck, of Kentucky, who was the Democratic leader of the Senate, who said to the writer one day that the only two questions worthy a senator's attention were the money and tariff questions. Senator Beck became a monetary expert, corresponding with the other experts throughout the world. If you will refer to his great silver speech of 1877 you will find that he begins with the assertion that on the day the world finally succeeds in the demonetization of silver, the prices of all commodities would recede to about one-half.

I have long been convinced that the present United States Senate can not compare with the Senate of Senator Beck's day. His colleagues were Edmunds, Hoar, Vance, Vest, Ingalls, Harrison, Voorhees, Evarts and others of preeminent ability. EMOLAS.

Run on Perpetual Building Association Demonstrates Solidity of Washington Financial Institutions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The run on the Perpetual Building Association, now ended, should serve as an object lesson to the people of Washington. Perpetual is the third largest financial institution in the city. For 50 years it has served the public. Its funds are invested in first mortgages on valuable Washington property. Idle and empty rumors were circulated against the institution. For two days frantic depositors withdrew their funds. Then they recovered their composure and the run ended. It is astonishing that the mob spirit should have ruled in Washington for even two days. The run on the Perpetual should serve to impress upon Washingtonians individually the seriousness of the situation that may follow the spread of false rumors with respect to the financial condition of banks. No damage has been done by the Perpetual run. If anything, it has served to acquaint Washington with the strength and stability of its financial institutions.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Miss Belmont Will Marry on February 26

L. F. Timmerman Is Fiance of Prominent New York Girl.

ASSOCIATED with Washington as the niece of Perry Belmont and daughter of the late August Belmont, jr., the engagement of Miss Bessie Morgan Belmont, which was announced yesterday in New York, finds much interest among members of the Capital's "one hundred."

Miss Belmont will wed Mr. Louis Felix Timmerman, the engagement having been announced by Mr. and Mrs. John D. Wing, of New York. The marriage will take place on the afternoon of February 26 in the chantry of St. Thomas' Church.

Following in the footsteps of her mother, the late Eleanor Robson Belmont (the second Mrs. August Belmont), who achieved an enviable reputation as an actress, Miss Belmont has "trod the boards" in several successful plays.

Although "The Criminal Code," in which she starred two seasons ago in New York, met with considerable success in the metropolis, the Washington engagement of the play last winter was canceled and Miss Belmont was forced to forego the visit with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, who had arranged to entertain her here at their home on New Hampshire avenue.

Miss Belmont has been under the guardianship of Mr. and Mrs. Wing since the death of her mother.

After the death of her father, her mother married Mr. John D. Wing, and after Mrs. Wing's death, Mr. Wing married again.

Miss Belmont attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury, Conn.

Her fiance is the son of Mrs. Louis F. Timmerman and the late Mr. Timmerman, of New York. He was graduated from Exeter Academy and Princeton University. During the war, Mr. Timmerman served as a captain in the Sixth Marines, A. E. F.

Hoovers Issue Invitations to Last Reception

Six Departments Will Attend State Affair on Monday.

The President and Mrs. Hoover have issued invitations for a reception at the White House on Monday evening at 9 o'clock in honor of the officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments. This will be the last of the state receptions of the season, and the first in history for those departments of the Government.

Last year the official calendar announced three separate receptions, one for the Treasury and Postoffice, one for the Interior and Agriculture, and one for the Commerce and Labor, but various periods of mourning delayed the state program so that these three had to be canceled. This year they are being given as one reception owing to the early lenten season. The reception will be on a Monday evening rather than Thursday as usual and so will take place before Ash Wednesday.

Mrs. Hoover was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Hobert Patterson Lamont entertained at luncheon yesterday in her home on Kalorama road. The other guests were the wives of the members of the Cabinet, and Miss Gertrude Lamont. Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of State, was the only one of the Cabinet women unable to attend. Mrs. Stimson with the Secretary is passing a few days in New York where the latter went to deliver an address last evening before the Council on Foreign Relations. They will return to Washington some time tomorrow.

Gen. William E. Crozier, retired, and Mrs. Crozier, of Washington, are at the St. Regis in New York.

AN unconditional donation of $200,000 has been made to the National Committee on Education by Radio, according to announcement by its president, Joy Elmer Morgan. The donor is the Payne Fund Foundation of New York City. Named by United States Commissioner of Education William John Cooper, the committee has, as one of its principal objects, the procurement of 15 per cent of the radio channels of the country for educational purposes. Such a bill is now in Congress.

Washington radio fans are making no end of inquiries regarding the expected appearance here at Constitution Hall Tuesday, February 16, when Phillips Lord, of "Uncle Abe" and "Seth Parker" fame is coming with Homer Rodeheaver to put on a charity benefit for the Central Union Mission. This performance will not be broadcast.

Mr. Lord is going to call at the White House and then at the National Press Club. After that there will be a luncheon by the directors and Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission.

Hugo Mariani will direct the orchestra today in the first of the series of "evening quality" Saturday morning broadcasts (WRC, 9:15 a. m.).

THE Washington Gas Light Ensemble, directed by Rudolf Schramm, will be heard, as usual, tonight (WRC, 6:15 o'clock). This concert orchestra is now heard twice weekly—broadcasting on Thursday evenings at the same hour.

The civic talk period (WMAL, 6 p. m.) will be filled by Dr. Arthur D. Call—"Modernizing Washington's Public Library System."

When the Highroad of Adventure broadcast is sent out this evening (WEAF network, 7:45 o'clock) several hundreds of Indians of the great deserts of the Southwest will be listening in to a program arranged for them.

John Barclay, barytone, and Dagfrid Rybner, pianist, heard together (WRC, are Mr. and Mrs. Barclay away from the microphone.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, will tell the Nation (WMAL, 9:30 p. m.) why he thinks drought sufferers should be relieved by Government funds.

Hank Simmons' Show Boat will be replaced tonight (WMAL, 10 p. m.), by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, from Miami, Fla.

THE name of the soprano soloist with the Wilkins Coffee Orchestra is Marguerite Clarke Cromwell, often referred to as "Washington's Jessica Dragonette."

A bit skeptical, believing that the zeal to aid a good cause may have caused the incident to be staged, a broadcasting official called up Little Rock, Ark., by long distance telephone to ask if the farmer, the first one who spoke in the Red Cross drought plea put on by Will Rogers and Columbia, had really left the microphone sobbing.

The reply came back from a reliable source that not only had the drought-stricken farmer wept at the conclusion of his talk but while the second woman had been able to get through her address, tears rolled down her cheeks and she broke down completely after leaving the microphone.

STATION WPG, Atlantic City, reports an unusual number of fan letters from across the Atlantic this year. E. M. Spence, director, says the foreign letters are most numerous from Scotland; Barnes, South Wales; London, Bristol, Liverpool and Manchester, England.

Dare Interprets the MODE

The Queen of Hearts is going to rule the Valentine party! (says Dah-ray).

Paris, Feb. 6.

VALENTINE'S comes on a Saturday this year, so that makes it just right for a party. And you know just nowadays when everything isn't so good is the very time to forget all about it for one evening and go out and make fun—be silly, have a good time!

Costumes needn't be anything much more than paper and imagination, you know, for a well-known novelty paper firm has made an "untearable" crepe paper especially for costumes. Or costumes of artificial ermine, tinsel and sateen lend themselves to just as much fun as expensive ones!

By all means plan to either have or attend a Valentine's party. Make it turn into a bridge party afterward if you wish, and even if all the guests are not costumed, the table decorations for either dinner or just refreshments can be very much in the valentine spirit. You'll be glad that you took the trouble to invite a few guests that night, and to entertain them in the valentine spirit, I assure you.

• • • •

There sketched for you is a cute valentine costume, one for the Queen of Hearts and another for the Knave of Hearts. That's what the leaflet for Valentine's we have prepared for you tells you how to make, the Queen of Hearts costume as well as a whole table decoration scheme for the valentine's party table. Most original, and easily and very inexpensively made, as you will see from the illustrated leaflet when you send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post. And, by the way, this table decoration idea is a complete one, and one that need not especially apply to a Valentine's Day party either.

• • • •

Black suede with crystal has become such a popular story for bags that it is no longer interesting to the smart woman. Black suede is still dressy, a crystal is still charming, but one is a bit bored with the whole together. The smart woman is using the black suede bag with the least touch of very expensive strass, or more often, marcasite, onyx or jade for the top. No more hugs bars, balls and knobs.

• • • •

Of course, with black less in favor for spring and summer than it was, black bags give way to colored ones. Even these show less of exaggeration in handles and trimming, and more discretion and good taste, I think, in their trimming notes.

• • • •

There is the same trend noticeable in jewelry—moderation in size, but exaggeration in value. The massive costume jewelry is still worn, but fine strands of real pearls. Single stones of great value set in platinum and single diamond drops are returning to favor and taking the place of the fantastic jewelry of last year.

• • • •

Can't help adoring the little sleeveless fur jackets, or vests, really, that are worn under tailored suits! Sometimes the scarf that ties jauntily at Miladi's throat is in matching fur, sometimes her purse or glove cuffs. Cute!

• • • •

And tomorrow we have again Dare's weekly fashion letter. Don't fail to look for it in the big Sunday Post.

Au Revoir!

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Beth Takes Comfort.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: I have been an interested reader of your column for quite some time, but have never contributed to it until today. However, I would like to say a few words in praise of the gentleman who wrote the inspiring letter to poor little Karick. I truly am glad to find there are such men left in the world.

Having just recovered from a most unhappy love affair, my opinion of men in general is just about at the lowest ebb. After having lavished love, affection, sympathy, generosity, encouragement and heaven knows what all for over a year on the man of my dreams, I was rewarded with deceit and hypocracy. Yes, I realize that I made a big mistake, and that most men do not appreciate such gifts. However, my idea of what a woman should be are as follows: To love one man and him alone, to offer encouragement when reverses are encountered, to sacrifice, to sympathize, and, to sum it all up, to play the game and be a woman to the end.

Therefore in closing let me thank the kind gentleman for his inspiring words to Karick. He has not only helped her, but the writer as well, and he has helped to rebuild my lost faith.

Beth, dear, your lost faith will come back as lost faith has a way of doing. People who have never suffered, never grieved, never lost things, never found things again, are seldom the vital full-grown people that make history.

Growth comes with experience and experience is seldom all joy. Yet we want to grow. We want to live. Some of us live a hundred lives while others are living one. Some of us know all the sign posts along life's way, while others know only their own front gate and the little walk down to the road. We have no choice! But if we did I wonder if we who know all the sign posts would be content to know only the little path down to the main road of life?

Some day, Beth, when all the tears are forgotten, you will know the answer. And tears are forgotten, Beth—after a while.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., and from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Tendencies for the day (February 7): influences will make you heady, and you will be inclined to rush into things precipitously, but not wisely, and expensive errors of judgment may be made. Overhead expenses will run away with profits. Fate will be kinder to young folk, who will have a thoroughly good time, and will make progress in their studies.

The child born on this February 7 will have a steady, quiet and practical character, which may find its outlet in many departments of life, according to circumstances. It may not be master of any trade, but it will be a fool at none. It will be lacking in enthusiasm, but will have energy.

You may not be a muscular athlete, but you are a mental athlete, and although you may neglect physical exercise, you do not neglect mental exercise. You are neither a mental or physical coward, and you always try to learn to ride the horse that threw you. You have the power of standing up to things, the never-say-die-spirit. You have healthy resilience, and are never a quitter.

You have an equable disposition, but one which is not without fire. You are a dignified and forceful fighter, and your manner, more than your words, indicates your displeasure. You are a born disciplinarian, and have a ruling personality. There is enough gentleness, and so much squareness about your nature that you win both respect and affection. You are fitted to do both mental and physical work. Either one alone would not satisfy one of your make-up—you need both mental and physical outlets.

When you have luck in life, you are anxious to share it, and you never lose any part of it thereby. If you have good news, you spread it—if you have bad news, you keep it to yourself, if possible.

Your head and your heart are joint rulers of your life, and their united efforts should secure your success in the field of matrimony. You are not a prude, but you believe in clean living, and clean thinking. You will never grow too old to be a "kid," with children.

WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

The above South hand is distinctly a preempting type and at Auction South's bid should be five Diamonds. Whether at Contract Bridge South should bid four Diamonds which, being a preempting declaration, would clearly earmark the character of the hand; or should risk five Diamonds to be surer of making his preemption effective and to insure playing at a game contract is a question. The risk would be that if he bid five, North might feel called upon to jump to six with one trick. If that trick happened to be the Ace of Clubs, South might lose four tricks and be down three. Even at that, South (unless vulnerable and doubled) probably would be much better off because West and East could make game at four Hearts, unless North should ruff a good Diamond and lead a Club—a very improbable combination of plays.

Played at five Diamonds an interesting situation arises. West would lead Clubs; South would trump the first trick and lead a small Diamond to be won with dummy's Jack. That would be done so as to get a Spade lead from dummy—practically the only hope of fulfilling the contract. In this hand if the Spade Ten were led from dummy, whether East played in honor or not, the Declarer would lose only one Spade trick (if East ducked, South would follow East's example), and in addition one Heart; winning the other eleven tricks would produce game.

Before playing the hand, Declarer would expect that both adverse Spade honors would win (North can not get in again to give South a second finesse), but this plan of play would be worth trying as it will make game if East has in Spades King-Queen-x- or King-x or Queen-x.

This hand illustrates the situation in which Declarer has only one desperate chance of winning game; when that occurs there is nothing for Declarer to do but avail himself of the chance offered.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

GREEN VEGETABLES FOR BABY.

(Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.)

Green vegetables cooked and mashed through a strainer should be started in the sixth month, and given once a day at 2 p. m. feeding just before nursing or with the bottle feeding. Give spinach three times a week, as it is the best vegetable for the baby. On the other days he may have carrots, chard, new green peas, fresh lima beans, fresh asparagus, string beans, young beet greens or cooked lettuce. Begin in the sixth month by giving one teaspoonful of mashed vegetable once a day and increase the amount fairly rapidly to one tablespoonful by the seventh month, two tablespoonsful by the eighth month and three tablespoonfuls by the ninth month. When the baby is one year old he may have also summer squash, Hubbard squash, celery, beets, cauliflower, kale and cabbage.

Cook leafy vegetables in a saucepan for 10 to 15 minutes without the addition of any water, except a little for cabbage (the water that is left on them after washing is sufficient). Stir frequently to prevent burning. When soft mash through a strainer.

Root and stalk vegetables chopped fine—such as carrots, celery and beets—should be cooked until soft in as little water as possible in a double boiler covered to prevent the evaporation of water (30 to 45 minutes). (The length of the cooking time depends on whether the vegetables are young or old). When soft put through a sieve or strainer. The water in which the vegetables are cooked contains valuable minerals and should be served with the vegetables.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PLEASE tell me what to do for the plant from which the inclosed leaf was taken. The entire plant is reaching the same condition as the piece of leaf I am inclosing.

S. B.

Your palm is suffering from the effects of gas or from too little fresh air. Better keep the surface soil in the pot quite loose and in the future water it every day, giving enough at each application to moisten all the soil in the pot.

Please tell me why my oxalis, which I planted in soil obtained from my florist, never bloom. They are a yellow variety and were first quality bulbs. I also have a pansy geranium which has been growing all fall near a window, the plant seems healthy in a way, but the stalks are not as thick as I feel they should be.

A SUBSCRIBER.

You should have planted your oxalis bulbs about one inch and a half deep. Too deep or too shallow planting is apt to cause them to fail to bloom. Water oxalis only every other day and keep the pots in a warm, sunny window. A pansy geranium requires more water than do other varieties of geranium. They also must have an abundance of sun at all times. A temperature of 68 suits them very well and sometimes a temperature of 65 will answer. Keep the soil in the pot quite loose. A little weak, liquid manure would improve conditions. Apply this when the plant sets buds.

Please tell me the requirements of a wax plant. I have one which is not doing very well. HELEN D. T.

The hoya, or wax plant, is a satisfactory vine for a warm window. The secret of success with this vine is to disturb its roots as little as possible. Keep it warm and rather dry except when it is making growth. In its growing season it needs considerable water. Never remove the little stems on which the flowers are produced, as next season new flowers will appear there. Keep the plant free from mealy bug, which is its only enemy. Having small roots it does not have to be repotted oftener than once in three years.

Please tell me the botanical name of the umbrella plant, the variety used in aquariums.

MRS. GEORGE F. T.

Cyperus alterwifolius.

Please tell me how often to spray a rubber plant and how often to water the soil in a warm room. I give it fresh air every day and it is doing well.

DR. VAN A.

Spray the plant at least once a week and water the soil every day.

Please tell me the best soil to get to fill a fernery and the best variety of low-growing ferns to plant in it.

DOROTHY B.

Use a soil composed of good loam, sand and leafmold in equal parts. Any of the pteris ferns do well in a fernery.

Is the farfugium a variety of fern and does it require heat or much water?

ELLA D. Y.

No, a farfugium is not a fern. It is a plant with large, circular leaves, dark green in color and spotted with yellow. It is often called the "leopard plant" because of its spots. It requires a good deal of heat, fresh air and water. It should have light at all times and about two hours of direct sun a day.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER XXXV.

Gen. Wood, back in the United States, found that, in being kept out of England, he was in good company. Roosevelt told him the story.

"It seems that Lloyd George had asked Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft to go to England and speak all over the country with a view to waking the people up and building up an interest in the American situation." Wood wrote in his diary: "Mr. Roosevelt, as a former President, could go unless he knew he could be received officially and in the proper way. This the British, of course, could not very well do without offending the present administration, strange as it may seem.

"Mr. Taft went down to find out whether the President would approve his going, as he did not care to go without his approval. He was told by Mr. Wilson rather briefly he did not approve his going; that our views were not those of the British; that there were too many people who disliked the British, &c.—that our aims were different from those of the British—in other words, his attitude was anything but pro-British. As it was, Mr. Taft did not go."

It was, as Roosevelt never tired of pointing out, "a very exclusive war," and Republican Presidents, past or potential, were not wanted.

Summoned to Capital.

On March 25 Wood reached Washington, summoned by two messages, one directing him to appear at once before the committee on military affairs of the Senate and the other ordering him before a medical examining board.

Wood was before the Senate committee for three and a half hours. Almost half the Senate was present.

Man power, he declared, was the first imperative need among the allies. They were grateful for the small force that America had sent, but their anticipation of assistance had thus far outrun American achievement. The spirit of the A. E. F., its food supplies and its training were all that the country could wish, but the lack of airplanes handicapped operations. There were now 1,000 American fliers in France, but no American fighting planes, and the French had none to spare. German planes flew almost at will over the small sector which American regulars were holding and flew so low that American soldiers frequently fought them off with their pistols.

He described the general breakdown in the air program—$640,000,000 appropriated and not one plane in France; the breakdown of the Ordnance Bureau, so busy trying to improve on everything that production stood still; the use by American troops of English-made uniforms, French machine guns, Italian trucks; the general collapse of the American supply system. The Nation had failed in the very matters in which it was supposed to be most efficient.

Wood Knew His Facts.

Wood was at his best always before committees of Congress. He knew his subject as few men in the world knew it; he had his facts—and they were deadly—and he had a way of organizing them, marshaling them and flinging them in phalanxes against the barriers of ignorance and prejudice, which was overwhelming as a tidal wave. "I told them the truth!" The gravity of the hour, the German triumph over Russia, the new surge forward of the German hosts toward Paris, gave the scene a dark setting. Wood's indignation, his devotion to the cause, the terrible earnestness of him, the determination that the amateurs and the bureaucrats, the self-satisfied and the bewildered should no longer be permitted to imperil the outcome or waste the lives of young men, gave his words a passionate ring that seemed to set the very room to rocking. Men wept, gesticulated, swore, beat against the walls. "I can't stand this!" exclaimed one of the senators, a Democrat. "The public must be told!"

Where, in Wood's judgment, they asked, did the responsibility lie?

"I said it lay properly in the head of the War Department and not entirely in the civilian branch, either," Wood wrote in his diary, "that the chief of staff had permitted the general staff to become thoroughly disintegrated, the best men having been given commissions and men inexperienced in general staff work left in charge of work with which they were wholly unfamiliar, also that civilians had been injected into the purely military work and, on the other hand, military men were attempting the supervision of civilian activities which they should not mix up with; that the inefficiency and incompetency were startlingly effective; so much so that it had resulted in a complete defeat of preparedness activities in many directions and was so well organized that it had a positive air of genius."

Greater Army Needed.

As for the talk of sending 500,000 men to France, an army of two and a half million would be needed there, with two and a half million in training at home.

With an oath Senator Thomas, of Colorado, a Democrat, exclaimed, at the conclusion of the hearing that he had been a good party man, but he was finished. Wood must see the President at once.

The senator called up the White House. The President, he was told, was in a cabinet meeting. He called twice more, and each time received the same answer. At last the President's secretary informed him that Mr. Wilson was taking the matter under advisement.

Wood's testimony, given supposedly under the seal of secrecy, was all over Washington before the day was done and next day all over the country. Editorials burning with indignation and resolve flowed from a thousand pens. The press printed merely the outline of what Wood had told; but his message was clear enough. England, France and Italy were looking to America for help, and America was floundering, ineffective, and asking them to do her work.

Chief Justice in Tears.

At the Capitol, Wood ran into Chief Justice White.

"He spoke of the situation with much feeling and bitterness; perhaps sorrow would be a better word. He realized that the gradual surrendering of its functions by Congress and the assumption of almost supreme authority by the Executive is a serious matter. Tears were running down his cheeks. He started to say something, hesitated and said that, as Chief Justice, he could not say what he wanted to, but he wondered how the present situation could be terminated. I have never seen a man in his position so upset."

Wood's testimony stirred the War Department as it had stirred the Senate, but to less profit. The bureaucrats were indignant and hurt. Did they not have the most grandiose plan ever conceived by one nation at war with another? Were they not trying to build the most wonderful army, seeking to design the most wonderful artillery, the most wonderful machine guns, the most wonderful airplane motors? What was the matter with Wood anyway? There were murmurs touching the nature of Wood's motives and the soundness of his judgment. The attack was oblique. Was Wood all right? Was Wood to be trusted? Wasn't Wood playing politics?

Wood faced the men in authority in the department singly and in groups and told to their faces what he had told the senators. To Gen. March, chief of staff, he insisted on the necessity of calling large numbers of men to arms, the necessity for a six months' period of training, the need of a vigorous policy.

To Gen. Wheeler, he recalled the seven months wasted in attempting to improve the recoil mechanism of the French field guns—"a criminal waste of time in this crisis." Baruch, head of the War Industries Board, had little to say, and appeared confused and worried over failures to report certain defects in the steel which was being purchased. At the War College, in the War Department, at the Capitol, he was a persistent, disturbing gadfly. At a meeting in Baltimore he even tried to "warm up" the Archbishop of Canterbury "so he would speak with more frankness" and give something other than the customary flattery which Englishmen seemed to feel was expected of them, and which made difficult the efforts of Americans to work for real efficiency.

Rumors multiplied that storms were gathering in Wood's head. Secretary Baker had told Col. John G. Greenway in France that Wood's health would not permit his exercising a command on the battle front; and Wood received intimations that the President himself was lamenting Wood's enfeebled condition. There were suggestions that Wood's weakness was mental. Rumor said that he would be scrapped by the War Department when he came up before the medical examining board. "They will do it," ran the word, "if they dare."

Examined by Doctors.

Three days after his appearance before the Senate committee Wood went before the medical examining board. The board consisted of Dr. Charles H. Mayo, Dr. Lewis A. Connor, Dr. Frank Billings and Brig. Gen. William H. Arthur as president. Arthur was an old enemy with whom Wood had had difficulty at the time of the Ainsworth controversy. Gorgas, the surgeon general, told him that he had the right of challenge. He exercised it. It was not a time to take chances.

The examination was thorough. Among other things he was made to hop about the room, first on one foot and then on the other. "He don't hop the way I do," exclaimed one of the examining surgeons, "but, my God, he can hop!" Members of the board remarked that they had never examined a subject of Wood's years and experience who presented so few physical defects, and gave Wood a clean bill of health, as physically qualified for active service.

An officer who had heard at Camp Funston the rumors that the findings of the board might be twisted to Wood's detriment, gave them to the press before any fine ItaHan hand could get to work.

Day after day Wood waited for a summons from the White House. Frank Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, offered him no encouragement. Although he had frequently been acting Secretary of the Navy, he had, he said, in the past year seen the President only twice. Once it had taken him three weeks to reach him; the other time, seven days. Roosevelt was clearly discouraged by the outlook. Out of all the effort was coming not more than one-third of the Nation's capacity of achievement.

The papers indignantly asked whether it was conceivable that it was not the President's desire and purpose to see Gen. Wood? Caustic comments came from near and far. Were senators pleading with the President to accord Gen. Wood an audience? "In the name of common sense and ordinary zeal for the national interest," why should he not accord it? Because Wood was a Republican? Because Wood had been right about preparedness?

Wood stayed in Washington ten days. But in spite of adjurations and admonitions, Wilson refused to face the animate fact which Wood was. He had faced another fact, recently, which was that the German people were not yet sick enough to listen to his seductive calling; and, that week, it happened, was writing the speech which was to inform the world that he was ready at last really to make war. That, however, did not mean that the President felt any more tender than before toward the man who had been telling him and others for three and a half years that force and force alone would bring Germany to terms.

Request Unacknowledged.

Wilson did not even acknowledge Senator Thomas' request that he hear Wood's story. Any information which the President desired, ran a statement issued at the White House, he could secure from the Secretary of War or the chief of staff.

He had, indeed, in the ringing peroration of his speech, written all that it was necessary for him to utter:

"There is, therefore, but one response possible for us: Force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world, and cast every selfish dominion in the dust."

Wood could afford to forego the presidential presence since Mr. Wilson at last agreed with him—a year late to the day—that a war was a war.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Money Values.

The value of money is something which a child must learn, not a thing he "just naturally" knows.

In homes where bills are paid chiefly by check, the child gets little chance to learn that everything he uses and enjoys has some specific money value. So it is well to teach him these things at times when he shows an interest in them.

The children may be playing store, and you observe that sugar is being sold for $3 a package while a pair of shoes goes for 10 cents.

Enter their play long enough to explain that sugar costs about 8 cents for a small package, while a good pair of shoes can hardly be bought for less than $5.

If you have money at hand, demonstrate the different amounts concretely, using one kind of coin so that the child may actually see that a much bigger pile of money is needed for one than for the other.

Another good way of helping a child to appreciate money values is to let him accompany you on marketing or short shopping expeditions, taking pains to explain what each item costs, and allowing the child to observe the amount of money as you pay it to the salesperson.

A third way in which the child learns about money values is through earning and spending. When he does a piece of work for you, he should be paid on a realistic basis, receiving neither more nor less than this same service would cost if done equally well by some one else. Being permitted to spend his earnings as he pleases, he will learn just how much a given sum will bring in pleasure or coveted possessions.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—A son is closely following in his father's footsteps. When Douglas Fairbanks, jr., signed a new contract, it not only provided for his services as an actor, but also as writer, director, art director and costume designer as well.

LAURA LAPLANTE.

The elder Fairbanks, as his own producer, has at one time or another had a hand in all these duties.

A Hunted Man.

As Maj. Owen (Black) Martin, formerly of his English majesty's forces, there is a price on his head in a certain part of East Africa.

There he led an expedition in 1917 against a revolting tribe, subduing it and putting to death its leaders. Present chiefs of the tribe, so Martin hears, will pay a reward of 500 camels for him.

Getting Ahead.

Any one who thinks Laura La Plante may contemplate retiring from the screen merely because she is now a featured player instead of a star is mistaken.

Miss La Plante was a star for five years. Nearly a year ago she "retired" because the roles she was playing were unsatisfactory to her.

Now she stands, cinematically speaking, where she was five years ago—a featured player—but appearing in the kind of parts and the kind of pictures she believes best suited to her. These are farces and comedy dramas.

There'll be no retiring for Miss La Plante, she says emphatically, until she has appeared in a picture she can call "great," and until she has enough money to take care of her comfortably for the rest of her life.

Note on efficiency: Little time is lost now in making movies when the weather is bad. If fog or rain interrupt outdoor shooting, companies move to stages for interior scenes.

Outside shots are scheduled first, no matter where they belong in the picture, but if they can not be made the indoor sets are used.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Higginbotham" (also spelled "Higginbottom" and "Higgenbottom"), has come down to us from two English sources. In some cases it means "the valley of Higgin," and indicates an original place of residence. A bottom or botham is a wide shallow valley suited for agriculture, generally along a river. In some cases "Higginbotham" means "the mountain-ash valley," that is, the valley in which or near which mountain-ash trees grow. In such cases the first element of this family name is the English dialect word "higgin" (also spelled "hickin"), which means "mountain-ash." Most of the families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in the small spot called "Higginbotham" in East Cheshire. The personal and family name "Higgin" has come down to us as a diminutive form of "Richard," which means "powerfully brave," and occasionally of "Hicca," which was an Anglo-Saxon personal name meaning "mind," "mood" and "courage." "Higginbotham" appears to be first recorded in 1563. A Cheshire church record of that year mentions a John Hyggynbothom.

The family name "Gleason" (also spelled "Gleeson"), is of Celtic origin. It is the modern form of the original Irish "O'Glasain," which means "the descendant of Glasan." "Glasan" is a diminutive form of "Glas," which may be translated "pale," "gray" and "with a livid complexion." "Gleason" is common throughout the south of Ireland, especially in Cork, Limerick, Tipperary and Kilkenny.

In the Magazine Section of

In This Feature Article

Former Senator Henry Clay Hansbrough talks of men and events during a period when American politics was a combination of rough-and-tumble fight and diplomatic exchange of notes. Intimate incidents in the lives of public men are here printed for the first time and the stories are told with the verve of a natural raconteur and the frankness of a boy. Each article is actually a page from an, up to this time, unwritten history of the U. S.

Other Interesting Features Include:

The Way of a Bird In the Air

Within a few days now you will be seeing feathered visitors who wintered in South America all about telling of their experiences to the home bodies who wintered in Washington. This article tells something about the migratory habits of birds, their paths through the air, and when they may be expected here. No city in the Union affords the lover of birds a better opportunity for enjoying his fad than Washington and it is hoped this article will prove helpful along those lines.

The Voice Behind the Mask

The politician is past master of the dual mental personality habit. In his public words he is one thing and in his speech in private a wholly different person. Now why is this? This article will furnish the answer and explain the cerebral Siamese Twin.

Life of Gen. Wood

The installment in the Sunday Magazine section of The Post today describes one of the biterest and most dramatic incidents in the life of the man who hoped to see active service in France, but who did not. Wounded and disappointed the General seeks an interview with President Wilson, but it availed nothing.

Edith Johnson

Miss Johnson writes in a helpful way of the problems which force themselves on the attention of everybody. A letter to her outlining your problem will be answered. Write Miss Edith Johnson, care The Washington Post.

THRIFT MEALS GIVE HOUSEWIFE CONCERN

Vitamins and the Part They Play Are Set Forth as Helpful Factors.

NEW CONTEST STARTED

The interest taken by women in food suggestions, food economics and food uses in this period of stress is evinced in thousands of letters that are being received by the woman's division of the President's emergency committee for employment. The good offices of the Bureau of Home Economics have been called upon to assist the woman's division in solving problems for homemakers.

The homemakers seem concerned especially over how to feed their families to keep them at the highest possible level of efficiency and health.

Yesterday the Bureau of Home Economics, through Dr. Hazel Munsell, chief of the nutrition studies section, said cod liver oil is a readily available source of vitimin A and D, and useful for adults as well as for children as a supplement to diets deficient in these vitamins, such vitamin-deficient diets as will be more common this winter as a result of unemployment and the drought.

Stress is laid by nutrition experts on the vitamin family, anyway. If one has a supply of the A, B, C, D vitamins in the diet the homemaker can fold her hands and rest content in the thought that these guardians of the family health are on the job.

A few cents' worth of cod liver oil daily is sufficient to supplement a restricted diet, said Dr. Munsell, and will enable children to grow normally and build up a resistance to rickets and tooth decay. It will give adults, as well as children, greater capacity for offseting infections of the eye, ear, nose and throat. This is because two of the essential vitamins, A and D, are found in cod liver oil.

Vitamins and Sunlight.

People living on minimum food budgets are not likely to eat enough natural foods to supply these two vitamins," Dr. Munsell said. "Liver and egg yolk are probably the richest source of vitamin D, commonly known as the antirachitic vitamin. Milk and dairy products also contain it in smaller quantities. These foods also supply A, the antiinfective vitamin, as do many vegtables, especially the green leafy ones. Vitamin D can not be stored in the body in quantity, so the supply must be replenished from day to day.

"Cod liver oil is frequently referred to as bottled sunshine, since direct exposure of the skin to sunlight changes one of the chemicals normally present in the skin to form vitamin D. Only certain rays do this. Most places have less sunlight in winter, and winter sunlight usually has fewer of the rays that form vitamin D. This makes it doubly important to safeguard the vitamin D supply this winter.

"Many industrial workers that are now out of jobs live in cities. Consequently they do not enjoy the benefits of normal exposure to sunlight. The situation is more acute in cities than in rural districts. Since the unemployed gather in cities, less natural food is available, and anything which satisfies hunger must suffice. Because of this fact their diets, in all probability, lack some of the foods that contain vitamin D. All these conditions make them doubly uncertain of their supply of this essential vitamin."

Aids Bone Development.

Cod liver oil doesn't take the place of calcium in the diet, but it has the property of stimulating the body to make use of the calcium in the food and of phosphorus as well, Dr. Munsell pointed out. In this way it controls bone development.

Other fish oils, especially tuna, sardine, menhaden and salmon, have been shown recently to contain large amounts of vitamin D, in the order named. This makes them important, even though, with the exception of salmon, they contain only small quantities of vitamin A. For this reason they can not do the double duty of cod liver oil.

The exact amounts of vitamin D found in the natural oils in which canned fish are packed has not yet been determined. They are valuable, however, and the bureau urges housewives to stop feeding them to the cat and to serve them to their families.

Menus for One Day.

Dinner—Rice pilau, bread, tea (adults), five-minute cabbage, butter or margarine, milk (children).

Supper—Cream of peanut butter butter soup, toast, milk for all, fried potatoes, butter or margarine, stewed dried peaches.

The prizes for the most valuable suggestions for the Saturday Food and Home Economics page of The Washington Post will be made next week. The letters received showed real interest on the part of our readers in the welfare of this page.

As a contest for the next two weeks the Home Economics Editor suggests a dollar dinner contest. Five book prizes will be given to the five women over 18 who send in the best menus calling for a dinner for five persons which can be served complete for the expenditure of $1. It can be done.

Be sure to list all the ingredients to be used with the current prices for them at the stores. Such a dinner is a thrift dinner, and there are household geniuses who can do it for less. Address your entries to the Home Economics Editor, Washington Post. They must be in her hands not later than February 16. Write only on one side of the paper in ink and sign your entry with your name and address and city. Originality and neatness as well as the balance of the proposed dinner will be considered in awarding the prizes.

Talk About Thrift Dinners.

Speaking of such thrift dinners, a food expert has written:

"Do your thrift dinners cry out 'thrift' or do they look so attractive and taste so good that no one can guess the cost? It's all a matter of careful planning. First, get an appealing menu, like the one given below; second, prepare the foods carefully; third, deem them worthy of your pretty china and table covers. Then you can say with sincerity to your casual guest, 'Do stay for dinner!'"

Menu.

Fried potatoes, 6 cents.
Mashed turnips, 8 cents.
Dressed lettuce, 10 cents.
Bread and butter, 8 cents.
Baked pineapple pudding, 26 cents.
Demitasse, 3 cents.

Veal loaf with carrot and pea sauce: Remove wrapper from a 7-ounce can of veal loaf, cover with boiling water and boil for fifteen minutes. Remove meat from can, placing it on a hot platter, make a sauce of one and one-half tablespoons butter, one and one-half tablespoons flour, two-thirds cup milk and the liquor from an 8-ounce can of carrots and peas. Add the carrots and peas, season to taste with salt and pepper, and pour over the veal.

"Baked pineapple pudding: Cream three tablespoons of butter and four tablespoons of sugar, add one well-beaten egg yolk. Add one-half cup of dry crumbs and one-half cup of crushed pineapple. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg white. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees, for 20 to 30 minutes. Serve with one-fourth cup of thin cream."

CALAVO PEAR GETS WELCOME IN EAST

SERVED "HALF SHELL"

Homemakers are welcoming the delicious Calavo pear which is sweeping into favor because of its many menu possibilities. From California this food pilgrim has found its way into Eastern markets. More plentiful this year and therefore much lower in price, the Calavo pear has the virtue of being wholesome and highly nutritious. It has an average energy value of 965 calories to the pound (equal to that of lean meat), stored as a natural oil, 93.8 per cent digestible, having an important regulative effect on the digestive system.

One of their virtues is that they make an excellent mid-day meal in themselves—satisfying, energizing, yet "light."

Calavos are ready to eat when the meat has so softened that the fruit yields easily to a gentle pressure of the full hand. The flavor is best when the meat is soft enough to spread easily with a knife, but before it has become so soft as to be discolored.

Calavos are economical, for a properly softened Calavo may be cut and partly used. The unused portion can be left in its skin in the refrigerator. If convenient, cover the cut surface with wax paper as an aid to preservation. If the fruit is not too soft, any small, discolored spots may be cut away. The rest of the meat will still be fresh and ful-flavored. Calavaos should not be placed directly on the ice or near the cooling unit of electric refrigerators. Extreme coldness causes the flesh to darken.

"On the half shell" is the favorite way in California to serve Calavos. To do this, cut a properly softened Calavo into halves and remove the seed. Serve one-half to each person. Serve on lettuce leaves. Eat with a spoon. Calavo pear is the aristocrat of salad fruit, but because of its richness, a heavy oily dressing should not be used with it. A French or other thin, sharp dressing is preferable. Connoisseurs prefer Calavos "plain," with a few drops of lemon juice or a little salt.

BUDGETS REDUCED BY SAVORY MEATS

Many Interesting Dishes Can Be Prepared Easily From Cheaper Cuts.

RECIPES ARE INVITING

Suggestions for economical meat dishes, easily prepared, nourishing and appealing to the eye as well as the palate, are welcomed by every busy woman. Securing variety in the meat course should never be difficult, for an almost unlimited number of interesting dishes can be prepared from the cheaper cuts of meat by the use of proper seasonings.

At this season of the year, especially, it is possible to serve meat dishes of the savory, oven-dinner variety that bring a new note into the menu and are enthusiastically welcomed by families coming in chilled and hungry out of the cold.

These recipes for practical, economical meat dishes will help to plan interesting meals:

Piquant meat loaf—Two pounds ground beef, 2 cups cracker crumbs, 1 medium can cream of tomato soup, 2 teaspoons salt, dash of pepper, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 cup sweet dill pickle, chopped.

All Thoroughly Mixed.

Mix together thoroughly the meat, cracker crumbs, cream of tomato soup, salt, pepper, minced onion and dill pickles. Pack into an empty can that has been thoroughly greased. Steam in a steamer, or set the can in a pan with enough hot water to almost cover, for about 1½ hours. Instead of steaming, this meat may be baked in a loaf, using a moderate oven, for about 1½ hours.

Leftover meat loaf—Brown slices of meat loaf, cut about ¼-inch thick, in a skillet with several tablespoons butter. Pour over the meat a small can of cream of tomato soup, and allow to simmer until a thick sauce is formed. Serve garnished with parsley.

Casserole of sausage and rice—One pound sausage, 2 cups cooked rice, medium-sized onion, chopped fine; 2 tablespoons grated cheese, 1 small can cream of tomato soup.

Brown sausage in a skillet, and pour off part of the fat. Arrange alternate layers of sausage and rice in a greased baking rish, and sprinkle each layer with chopped onion. Pour over this the cream of tomato soup, and cover the top with grated cheese. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Swiss Steak—2½ pounds round steak, 1 inch thick; 2 tablespoons fat; ½ onion; ½ cup flour; salt and pepper; ½ green pepper chopped fine; 2 cups boiling water or 1½ cups water and ½ cup tomato ketchup.

Add salt and pepper to the flour and pound into the meat. Brown in a skillet with the fat, then add the onion, green pepper, boiling water and tomato ketchup. Cover closely and simmer slowly until done. This also may be cooked in the oven in a casserole.

Another Good Recipe.

Braised Beef—2 pounds beef, round or shoulder; salt and pepper; flour; 2½ cups boiling water; fat; potatoes; 1 cup diced carrots; 1 cup diced turnips; 1 cup diced onions; 1 cup diced celery; ½ cup tomato ketchup.

Sprinkle beef with salt and pepper, dredge well with flour, and brown quickly in fat which has been tried out from the meat. When turning the meat, avoid piercing it with a fork, as this allows the inner juices to escape. Place in a casserole or deep pan and add diced carrots, turnips, onions and celery. Add the boiling water to tomato ketchup and pour two-thirds of this liquid around the meat and vegetables. Cover closely and bake about two hours in a slow oven, 325 degrees F., basting every half hour with the remaining liquid. Turn the meat over once during the cooking. During the last hour of cooking, whole potatoes should be placed around the meat and baked until tender.

VEGETABLE PLATE CONTRAST NEEDED

SAUCE IMPORTANT ITEM

When vegetables constitute a large portion of a meal or when one is serving the type of dinner sometimes called a "vegetable plate," attention must be given to variety and contrast in both flavor and texture. There should be at least one hearty kind, that is, one that contains a rather high proportion of protein and starch, either in the vegetable itself or in the other foods combined with it. Milk, cheese, and eggs are often used in sauces on vegetables, and add to the proportion of protein.

There should be also something crisp, something soft, something milk flavored, something acid, and at least one pronounced flavor to give zest to the entire combination. There should be enough richness in the seasoning of the vegetables or the way they are cooked to make them substantial enough for the main course at dinner.

This can be obtained by the use of butter or cream or by frying one vegetable. Much-needed minerals and vitamins are supplied by most of the vegetables. Give some thought, too, to the colors that will predominate on the plate. An attractive appearance stimulates appetite.

The vegetable plate in the illustration, which was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, fulfills the foregoing requirements. Green pepper, stuffed with a rice and meat mixture, is substantial. Celery is crisp in texture and has a pronounced flavor. Fried eggplant adds richness as well as another distinctive flavor, and its browned crumbs add to the color as well as to the "crunchiness" of the vegetables. String beans will be liked as a contrast to the other flavors, and there is a bit of pickle to furnish the necessary acid which rounds off the dinner.

Apple Jam Excellent With Cinnamon Candy

4½ cups (2¼ pounds) apples.
5 cups (2¼ pounds) sugar.
2-3 cup cinnamon candy.
¼ cup commercial liquid pectin.

Use only fully ripened fruit. Do not peel. Quarter and add ¼ cup of water. Cover tightly and simmer for five minutes or until apples are soft. Sieve to remove skins. Measure apples, sugar and candy into large kettle, mix and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim, pour quickly. Cover hot jam with film of hot paraffin; when jam is cold ocover with ⅛-inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Requires about 2½ pounds apples. Makes about ten 8-ounce glasses. Any candy which is not dissolved when the mixture is poured will dissolve in the jam within a week or two.

Freshly Boiled Water Best for Brewing Tea

Teapots should be scalded a few seconds before tea brewing starts. In preparing water for the brewing, the water should be allowed to boil furiously—a mad, bubbling boiling is best.

Freshly boiled water should be used—always. Water that has been boiled and then allowed to stand for some time makes a flat tasting brew.

MEMBER IS REFUSED SEAT IN PARLIAMENT

MAN AND WIFE ARE FINED

London, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—From the humblest beginnings T. I. Mardy Jones built up his life by little things—small determinations piled one on another—until he became a member of Parliament, a respected citizen, a recognised economist and an honored figure in society, industry and politics.

And now, when he is 52, a paltry thing has caused the whole carefully erected structure to crumble. He used his nontransferable parliamentary railway pass for his wife, and in the court proceedings which followed he resigned from Parliament.

Through his lawyer he explained he was engaged in the South Wales coal strike negotiations and urgently needed an important document from his home. He did not care to entrust it to the mail, so he asked his wife to bring it to London. Thoughtlessly he sent her two of the privileged tickets and she used them.

Today he and his wife were each fined $20.

Jones began his upward struggle at the age of 12 as a pit boy in a South Wales mine.

He was a member of the Royal Society of Economists and parliamentary agent for the South Wales Miners' Federation. Then he made an admittedly stupid slip and lost everything.

He must go back to Pontyprodd, humiliated, his pupile position lost, and a poor man, for his only income was his parliamentary salary of $2,000 a year.

As he stumbled out of the court with his wife today, some of those in the crowd which had come to witness the proceedings even speculated on the possibility that he would be driven back to spend his last years as he spent his first, grubbing for a scant living in a coal pit.

Rose Co. Lowest Bidder on School

Offer Covers Additions to Stuart Junior High; 13 Compete.

W. P. Rose Co., of Goldsboro, N. C., was lowest of thirteen bidders on construction of additions to the Stuart Junior High School, Fourth and E streets northeast, Roland M. Brennan, chief clerk of the District engineering department, announced, after bids were opened yesterday afternoon. The bid by this concern was $160,600.

The additions consist of ten rooms and two gymnasiums. The highest bid was $202,202. The Rose Co. was the center of a heated labor controversy several months ago, when it was found to be low bidder on the Roosevelt High School. It lost the contract on a technicality.

Only one more school on the District's fiscal year program remains, and the drawings on its plans are near completion in the municipal architect's office. This is the Powell Junior High School.

British Princes, in Panama, Enjoy Flight Over Canal

Panama City, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Two of the world's most traveled royalties, the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, arrived in Panama today and enjoyed a crowded program that included an aerial view of the Panama Canal, a reception at the palace of President Ricardo Alfaro and a round of golf.

The princes landed at Colon from the liner Oropesa, which is taking them on their good-will journey to South America, and after a brief welcome by diplomatic and military officials took to a plane for a 30-minute flight over the canal.

Both of them expressed their pleasure at the opportunity of seeing the great engineering work from the air.

The Price of Wales was particularly interested in the famed Culebra cut and commented on what he termed the magnificent work of the engineers who overcame such great difficulties there.

The plane landed at Taitailia Airport near here and the princes drove to the presidential palace, where they had a glass of champagne with President Ricardo Alfaro.

They lunched at the British Legation as guests of the Minister, Maj. C. Braithwaite Wallis, and then went to the country club for a round of golf. Another colorful item on the program was a parade of West Indian Boy Scouts, who were reviewed by the Prince of Wales.

TEMBLOR IMPARTIAL IN TAKING LIFE TOLL

Those at Prayers, Convicts, Aged and Young Victims in New Zealand.

BODIES STILL HUNTED

Napier, New Zealand, Saturday, Feb. 7 (A.P.).—With her usual impartiality, nature dealt death in Tuesday's earthquake without regard to rank, age, sex or other classification.

Among 100 bodies so far identified are persons of every category. Young girls just entering a life of usefulness met the same fate as fourteen men living out their last tired years in an old men's home.

Convicts in jail died at the same moment as men and women kneeling in communion service at the cathedral and nurses tending the sick in a hospital.

Almost half the identified dead are women and girls, and the complete list runs the whole scale of human classification.

Poor and rich, good and bad, young and old, men and women, boys and girls, wise and imprudent—death reached out blindly and mowed them down with indiscriminate hands.

While sailors continued patrolling the streets of the ravaged towns today to prevent looting, reinforcements to the squads of rescuers risked their lives among the leaning walls and tottering ruins reaping the sad harvest of the disaster.

The known dead now total slightly more than 150, but the full list, if indeed it ever is known, will, in the opinion of the relief workers, be considerably greater.

Red Cross Building Bids Are Received

Lowest Tender Out of 35 Is $698,000; Action Set for Next Week.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, will submit a recommendation next week regarding the award of a contract for the Red Cross office building to be erected on Eighteenth street, between D and E streets. Thirty-five bids were opened yesterday, the lowest being $698,000.

The low estimate was submitted by two firms—McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, and Thomas G. Sperling Co., of New York. Castor & Castor, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was high bidder, with $875,200.

The structure, half of the cost of which is borne by the Federal Government, is to be five stories in height and of marble exterior. It will be located on the west side of the Red Cross quadrangle.

Natural Gas Has Come to Washington

Perhaps there are some things you would like to know about it?

THERE is a tendency for some people to think that because natural gas comes out of a hole in the ground it can be had for almost nothing. But expense rises rapidly when gas is transported in underground pipes hundreds of miles under pressure. Natural gas, in itself, will not mean cheaper gas.

Natural gas will not mean a change in the heat content of gas (measured in British Thermal Units) which is delivered to customers of the Washington Gas Light Company, Georgetown Gas Light Company or its subsidiaries. Already this city has changed smoothly, surely, over to the new mixture. No one has seen any difference because, in effect, there is no difference.

What Does Natural Gas Mean?

In order to bring gas up to the 600 B. T. U. standard required here by the Public Utilities Commission, it is necessary to spray the lean gas with expensive crude oil. This is a difficult process which slows up production.

Natural gas, which has a much higher heat content than manufactured, will be used to replace crude oil in our plant. It will be mixed with manufactured gas. But the fuel you use will be predominantly manufactured gas. And will therefore retain all the characteristics of manufactured gas.

But this is why natural gas is really significant from the public point of view. It will increase the capacity of our present plant. It will speed up production, because it is easier and quicker to mix the gas than it is to enrich it with oil.

Our manufacturing plant is somewhat out of date and, by itself, would soon be inadequate to take care of the fast growing demand for gas. Natural gas will mean (and this is important) that Greater Washington will have, beyond any doubt, a sufficient supply of gas until Congress sees fit to pass suitable merger legislation which will enable Your Gas Company to modernize its plant and produce an unlimited supply of gas under economic conditions.

Why Not Straight Natural Gas?

Perhaps you have heard of the wonders of natural gas—that it is a panacea for all evils, and wonder why Your Gas Company does not distribute straight natural gas. This is why.

Washington is hundreds of miles from the source of supply—the gas fields. Even if conditions were 100% favorable it might not be wise for Washington to rely solely on natural gas.

But there is a more fundamental reason. It is the opinion of some of the best engineering minds in the country that if a modern plant were constructed here, gas could be produced cheaper than the cost of natural gas delivered by pipe to Washington. The construction of such a plant at present is contingent upon the passage of merger legislation now pending in Congress.

In the meantime natural gas does bring to the public the absolute assurance that the Gas Company will be able to supply sufficient gas of the same quality it always has, to satisfy the ever growing demand.

This frank discussion is offered because it is our belief that every man, woman and child in Greater Washington has a stake in his or her Gas Company. For this reason they have a right to know the facts.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

A BACKWARD member of the cost in learning the new technic of the talkies has been none other than the camera film itself, but according to a dispatch hot off the wire from Hollywood the Eastman Kodak Co. announces today that it has at last coached this long, slim recalcitrant into acquiting himself gracefully under the more trying conditions of sound pictures.

Eastman representatives on the West Coast yesterday demonstrated to a group of cameramen and laboratory technicians a new type of film about three times as "fast" as that currently in use. Increased speed, in cinematographic language, simply means it can do with less light—which is extremely important, since sound film is made with much less light than it was formerly the custom to employ.

The new film is expected to permit much greater latitude in staging camera lens diaphragms to admit more light. This has, in turn, decreased the depth of focus—I trust I am not getting too far back in the book or talking too fast—so that the action necessarily has been restricted to a narrow space to keep it within range.

This improved gelatin has been under development for the past three years. The Eastman people claim it will prove of great value in color photography, because of its extreme sensitiveness. It will permit sound-picture making with from one-half to two-thirds the amount of light now used, which should be of vast assistant to newsreel cameramen.

"Supersensitive panchromatic" is the name applied to this processed celluloid. The sensitive emulsion is closely related to that used in astronomical photography. It was recently used in seeking to learn whether there is water in the atmosphere of Mars. It is also closely allied with that recently perfected for superspeed plates used by news photographers.

Well, if there isn't Dr. Einstein. How are you, Al?

It should be deemed important by Washington's picture-loving public that "Cimarron," Radio Pictures' genuinely epic screen version of Edna Ferber's widely read novel of the same name, which began its regular local engagement at the RKO-Keith Theater last midnight, is being shown at the Fifteenth street house precisely as it was presented in the same theater to two invited audiences upon the memorable evening of its world premiere two weeks ago.

Not infrequently it is found advisable to make deletions and reduce the footage between the time of a picture's preview and the occasion of its first commercial presentation. Such has not been the case with "Cimarron." It is the same print that was used here two weeks ago that is being run off now at RKO-Keith's, without the elimination of a single inch of its original length.

Since the normal running time of "Cimmarron" is slightly in excess of two hours, this determination to adhere to its original length—it is all so fine that any deletion would seriously mar it—has necessitated a revision of house schedules. In order to accommodate six feature presentations a day, it will be necessary to open the doors daily, except Sunday, at 9:45 a. m. "Cimarron" then will be shown at 10:07 a. m., 12:22, 2:37, 4:52, 7:07, and 9:22 p. m.

There will be no lost motion at any performance, the only supplementary being an abbrevaited edition of the Radio News—and maybe not that.

In case you have been tearing your hair about it, the new officers of the Washington Film Board of Trade are our good friends Rudolph Berger, branch exchange manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, president; Frank McNamee, ditto for Radio-Keith Orpheum, vice president, and Robert Smeltzer, the same for Warner Bros. and First National, secretary-treasurer.

When "The Greeks Had a Word for It" was purchased as material for her next screen vehicle, it was thought it would be a good idea for her to play the Muriel Kirkland role in the Pacific Coast production of the play. Miss Talmadge spent several days rehearsing her part, then suddenly withdrew from the cast—as she should have done at the New York Hippodrome years ago when she and Connie attempted a dance routine as a featured number on a huge benefit program.

Incidentally, the wholesale invasion of the legitimate by movie stars, that threatened in the early part of the season, seems to have blown up with an effectively muffled bang.

Colleen Moore and Olive Borden tried out in plays on what is left of the road, but quickly closed. Vilma Banky and her husband, Rod La Rocque, were announced for the National, but never put in an appearance, although I understand they are still touring the hinterland in Anita Loos' "Cherries Are Ripe."

Lois Moran, never so hot as any of these in celluloid, who scored an unequivocal personal success as the ingenue in Robert E. Sherwood's "This Is New York," is the only cinema luminary who has managed to put herself over in a smart and expansive way.

All of which points a very strong moral, although at the moment I don't seem to recall what it is!

If there is any one in the audience who yearns for something to look forward to, Loew's Palace is soon to offer "Fighting Caravans," Paramount's big "Western," with Gary Cooper and Lily Damita, the French flash of lightning, and "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," a picturisation of the old farce, with Buster Keaton, Charlotte Greenwood and Reginald Denny. At the Columbia, "Reaching for the Moon" is on the way, with Douglas Fairbanks, pere, Bebe Daniels, peach, and Edward Everett Horton, nut!

The newsreles this week are featuring the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the entrance of Papa Carl Laemmle into the hazardous business of guessing what the public wants. Since his Universal Co. captured first prize last year with its "All Quiet on the Western Front," he would seem not to have done so badly this last quarter century—as is testified to on the screen by Will H. Hays, Cecil B. De Mille, and Mary Pickford, Will Rogers, William Haines, Irving Thalberg, Louis B. Mayer, Victor McLaglen and many more moom pitcher notables you will probably recognize if you look quickly and closely.

Whther you look quickly and closely, or whether you don't you probably won't notice much as Capt. Malcolm Campbell phffts past in his Bluebird II at 245 miles per hour. All you can see is the roar!

If it's all the same to you and the captain, I'll go on the milk train!

ACACIA WILL SELECT DIRECTORS IN MARCH

BANK CONVENTION AIDS

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

The annual meeting of Acacia Mutual Life Association will be held at noon, March 17, at the home office, 101 Indiana avenue northwest, Secretary J. P. Yort, of the association, announced yesterday. At this meeting election of directors to serve for the coming three years will be held and other business that many properly come before it will be transacted.

In announcing the meeting, Secretary Yort states that payments made to beneficiaries or to insured this fiscal year amount to more than $4,130,000, which brings the total for the eight years since 1922, when the association was changed to an old-line company, above $14,500,000. In addition, Acacia has paid its insured as dividends during these eight years nearly $5,500,000. Assets, held for the protection of all members, amount now to $39,465,106.

"The reason for these record increases is obvious," Mr. Yort writes to members of the association. "Acacia is offering a service to its members that resolves itself into a substantial saving and gives them the best protection obtainable. You yourself are enjoying the low guaranteed rate of the nonparticipating stock company, combined with the dividend or profit-sharing advantages of membership in this old-line mutual company."

Convention Aids Named.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, general chairman of the 1931 convention committee of the District of Columbia Bankers Association has announced appointment of the following members of the hotel committee, in addition to Luther E. Schreiner, chairman and J. T. Exnicios, vice chairman:

J. D. Howard, president, Seventh Street Savings Bank; Louis C. Eckloff, assistant cashier, National Metropolitan Bank; H. G. Meem, vice president, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; F. Cuniberti, president, International Exchange Bank; W. R. Lewis, cashier, Northeast Savings Bank; Thomas F. Hickman, vice president, Franklin National Bank; R. L. Flather, assistant secretary, American Security & Trust Co.; R. L. Schreiner, president, Bank of Brightwood.

The maximum daily sendout of gas for January this year was 27,800,000 cubic feet as compared with 24,841,000 cubic feet last year, the latest report of Frank A. Woodhead, operating vice president, Washington Gas Light Co., reveals. The minimum daily sendout was 21,557,000 cubic feet.

Gas Appliance Sales Gain.

Mr. Woodhead attributed most of the increase to house-heating and gas appliance sales.

"Plans are being made to improve and add to the local plant in expectation of still a greater load," he said. "The popular use of gas for house-heating and the sale of gas appliances have combined in the past few months to build up a production demand never before equaled in Washington."

The coming of natural gas, although effecting no change in heating content of the gas when it reaches the consumer, will enable the gas company to increase its capacity more readily on demand, Mr. Woodhead said. The process of enriching manufactured gas in the past by crude oil required not only more time, but added facilities.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 6.

In the making of an income tax return for the year 1930, taxpayers of every class, business and professional men, wage earners and farmers, should present to themselves for consideration the following questions:

Did you receive any interest on bank deposits?

Did you have any property from which you receive rent?

Did you receive any income in the form of dividends or interest from stocks or bonds?

Did you receive any bonuses during the year?

Did you act as broker in any transactions from which you received commissions?

Are you interested in any partnership or firm from which you receive any income?

Have you any income from royalties or patents?

Have you minor children who are working?

Have you control of the earnings of such children? If so, the amounts must be included in your return of income.

Did you receive any directors' fees or trustees' fees in the course of the year?

Answers to all of these questions are necessary to determine whether a person has a net income sufficiently large to require that he or she file a return. If single, or married and not living with wife or husband, and the net income for 1930 was $1,500 or more, or the gross income $5,000 or more, a return is required, regardless of whether the net income is nontaxable by reason of the personal exemptions and credit for dependents. A person who was single during the taxable year and whose net income was less than $1,500 and whose gross income was less than $5,000 is not required to file a return. Neither are returns required of married couples living together during the taxable year whose aggregate net income was less than $3,500 and whose aggregate gross income was less than $5,000.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—The Republic Steel Corporation, formed early last year by the merger of several steel companies, had a net loss of $3,522,009.20 for 1930, the company announced today. The loss is equivalent to $1.74 a share on the 1,989,212 shares of common stock outstanding.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

WINTER NOTES, DANGERS AND HINTS.

(These suggestions are taken from Scoutcraft, December, 1930.)

"FREEZING. A frozen part of the body will have the color of lead and feel hard to the touch. It will be insensible. The old-fashioned method of rubbing with snow often causes the skin to rub off, which later leaves scars and is liable to infection. Small frozen sections can be thawed out by holding the hand over them. Parts recovering from freezing are treated almost like burns. They should be kept surgically clean and protected by a coating of sterile vaseline."

Let us add this: Frozen parts must not be put in warm water or exposed before a fire, or held over a radiator. They can be thawed with clean, cold water or by covering with wool or fur or by contact with warm skin. The sensitiveness to cold which follows freezing can be overcome by bathing in warm (not hot) melted paraffin as recently described in this column.

Scoutcraft warns against profuse sweating due to overdressing and heavy exertion while hiking, skiing, or skating. Avoid having the garments become wet with sweat by removing surplus wraps and sweaters.

"Wet feet: Hikers are especially warned against getting the feet wet, or at least letting them stay wet. The boots should be kept well greased. Extra socks should be carried on the hike. If the feet are wet or cold or both time off should be taken and the socks should be changed."

Frostbite is a very troublesome affliction and its effects are long continued. While cold foot baths and vigorous rubbing, and especially baths in warm paraffin will help to relieve the itching and burning, and tendency for the toes to turn dead white, prevention is much better than cure.

Scoutcraft advises hikers to keep out of the smoke when they sit around an open camp fire. "Smoke, for a period of time, is bad for the eyes, causes them to tear and smart, and if continued for a length of time will cause smoke blindness." Hikers are advised to sit in the position where the smoke blows away from them. The smoke from certain woods contain volatile poisons capable of causing skin eruptions and are unduly irritating to the air passages and eyes.

AGED NORWEGIANS.

R. V. N. writes: A friend, returning from Norway, makes the statement that Norway, with its population of three or four millions, has more centenarians than the United States. I can not believe this and do not like to have others credit it if it is not so, and would greatly appreciate information regarding this, if you have access to it.

REPLY.

I do not know just what the figures show, but there are many old people in Norway. The stock is a hardy, long-lived one. Emigration leaves the old behind. America is too young and has benefited too much from immigration of young people for us to have our proportion of centenarians. Give us time.

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Pugilism suffered a serious social loss when Gene Tunney retired, but I am assured that this will be repaired by Max Baer, of California, whose representative reminds me again that the boy is in love with a beautiful society belle of the haut monde.

"Please do not think that I am merely trying to obtain publicity," says Mr. James Jennings, representing Mr. Baer, "when I tell you that within six months this boy will be so refined that he will make Tunney look like a member of the lower classes. I am merely trying to set you right and publicity is farthest from my thoughts, as Baer is so refined already that he says publicity is distasteful to him. I expect him to give a luncheon for the press no later than March 1 so that he can make a speech insulting the boys, which is the derby test of refinement in society as we, of course, know.

LUNCHEON TO INSULT SCRIBES

"My position with Baer is not that of public relations counsel, as you may have surmised in your dumb way, but that of interpreter. I am engaged to interpret Max to you newspaper boys, of whom I used to be one myself, just as Stephen Jerome Hannagan, who also used to be a former member of the Fourth Estate, interpreted Gene. My most difficult task at present, next to keeping photographers off the place, is to explain in simple language which the pressmen will understand why it is that Max spends so much time playfully bouncing his skull off the concrete backwall of the handball court at Gul Wilson's quaint and secluded training resort, where all is balmy, including air.

"The explanation goes back to the afternoon that he met the delicate society bud who is now the object of his affections. They met at half-past 2, and when the waiter finally came with the check, friendship had ripened gradually into love. But Max knew in his heart that he was not of the same social stratum as this exclusive debutante of the ultrarefined society set, so he decided to devote himself to culture right away.

"Get me a book of the longest words you can find,' he said to me that night, and when I brought him the dictionary the first word he hit upon was something about concussion of the brain. So he asked a doctor about concussion of the brain and discovered that if a fellow gets hit on the head too often he is likely to get this trouble unless he has a very stout skull. Then Max reasoned the matter out for himself and decided that he would have to continue fighting in order to earn enough money to support his betrothed in her customary sumptuous style, and, of course, he realized that in fighting he would have to get hit on the skull. So now, to avoid the harmful effects of this hammering on the skull, he spends a certain time every afternoon bouncing his skull off the concrete wall to toughen it.

TOUGHENING SKULL ON WALL

"Tunney did somewhat the same thing to toughen his hands. He used to carry around a couple of little springs in his hands and work his fingers on them constantly, on the street, at home and everywhere. With Max the determination to toughen his skull is just as persistent. That is why, when he is driving through the streets, people sometimes are amazed to see a handsome, intelligent young man jump out of his automobile and spend ten or fifteen minutes tapping his head against the corner stone of some bank or library.

"People ridiculed him at first, but he is going to have the last laugh yet and, moreover, he is going to win the heart and hand of the one he loves. Right now you could hit him over the head with a yard of pipe iron and his eyes would retain the same expression and his speech would remain just as intelligent as before.

"I confess that I sometimes think he seems to be spinning a bit, but Max explains this is because his brain is in a whirl over love. As far as I am concerned, it is just as bad to be dizzy over love as to be dizzy from too much skull practice, if not more so, but then I don't manage him. I just explain him.

DICTIONARY TOO HEAVY TO CARRY

"I think Mr. Hannagan had a similar problem explaining why Tunney used to go off into the woods and run backward for miles, but the seventh round in Chicago explained all, didn't it?

"The dictionary was too big for Max to carry on the roadwork, so he put out the road work and now he does practically nothing but read the dictionary. I tried to get him to start on little words like 'anent' and

Baer Beaten On Points by Loughran

Winner Is Forced to Weather Storm in 9th Round.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight champion, outboxed and outpunched Max Baer, young Californian heavyweight for ten rounds tonight to win an easy decision. Baer weighed 200½; Loughran, 183.

ROUND ONE—Tommy danced a neat circle around the burly Westerner, spraying his face with lefts. Baer chased the fleet Philadelphian clumsily, swinging wildly and missing a score of punches until he stumbled in close to drive a hard right to the side. A flurry of lefts drew blood from Baer's nose and Tommy straightened the crouching Californian with a harsh right uppercut just before the bell.

ROUND TWO—Baer finally caught Tommy with a right to the heart and hammered him about the ring with solid belts to the body. Tommy shot a half dozen lefts into Baer's features but again Max flashed his right though he missed two rights to the head. Baer ripped a left to chin but took a lacing around the head and body in the next clinch. Loughran was boxing cautiously at the bell.

ROUND THREE—Baer lunged wildly as Loughran, working masterfully popped lefts to his head and sank left hooks deep in the Californian's body. Baer stopped charging, made Loughran come to him, and took the worst of it until he forced Tommy to the ropes. A shower of lefts and rights to the head rocked the Philadelphian, but he weathered the storm and was poking Baer's head at the gong.

ROUND FOUR—Loughran flickered the Californian's head with a dozen left hooks and jabs and easily evaded Baer's wild returns. Max grinned disdainfully, but Loughran danced around him, painting his features with stinging leather. Baer shot a right to the heart as Tommy came in, but had to run away as Loughran nailed him on the chin with a right uppercut. The Californian was still caught in a stream of tantalizing punches at the gong.

ROUND FIVE.

Baer, using his great advantage in height and reach, swarmed all over Loughran and succeeded in hitting him twice in the middle of the back. Tommy circled the big curly head carefully popping jabs and hooks into his swelling features. Occasionally risking a right to the chin. The best Baer could do was an occasional right to the body. The crowd roared at Baer's helplessness at the gong.

ROUND SIX.

Baer charged wildly and helplessly and Loughran met him cooly with both hands to the head. Tommy backed into a corner and dazed Max about the head with both hands. The clumsy Californian, dizzy from punches, tried to spar with Loughran and the crowd howled at his awkward efforts. Max was terribly disturbed and thoroughly lathered at the bell.

ROUND SEVEN—Loughran boxed with all his old-time speed and defense and Baer might as well have been punching at a shadow. Tommy ducked the Californian's wide swings, tsepped inside to counter short and neat with both hands, and was away again before Baer could find him. Rarely has such a display of boxing skill and accurate though not deadly punching been turned loose in the Garden on so hapless an opponent. Baer was laughing at his own efforts, along with the crowd, as the round ended.

ROUND NINE—Baer nailed Loughran with a straight right to the chin, a bolt from the blue, and Tommy held frantically as Baer smashed his body with both hands. Tommy bulled his way into a clinch, rested and came out spearing Baer's face in the customary manner with jabs hoks and crosses. Max's chanee disappeared as Loughran took complete command again and belted the clumsy, helpless Californian with showers of stinging clouts to the head. Tommy was coasting at the bell.

ROUND TEN—Baer forced his way to close quarters through the stream of jabs Loughran poured into his head, but he could not land clearly. With the fight apparently won several times over, Loughran took things easy, content to jab, dance and counter carefully. Baer missed a dozen wild heaves and Tommy missed not a single opening right up to the final bell.

THERE is nothing unmanly about the name, "Bull" Chalmers, and certainly you wouldn't expect the person so named to run away from battle. But he did last night in Brookland Gymnasium before 1,000 popeyed fans, and, as a result, Maryland's basketers defeated their old rivals, the Cardinals, of Catholic U., 24 to 21.

It was all in the game, Bull's running away, for he made what they call the "sneak" to his basket to cage the decisive goal with a minute and a half to play.

On the tap-off, after Bus Sheary, of Catholic, tied the score at 21 to 21 with a long shot, the ball fell among a struggling mass of muscular humanity near the center of the floor. Every player was there except "Bull," who was streaking down under the Cardinal goal.

Ronkin Tosses for An Assist.

Then Ed Ronkin, "Bull's" fellow forward, snatched the ball and shot it on a line down the floor, Chalmers, with an over-the-shoulder catch, made one leap and deposited it for 2 precious points.

With this lead Maryland held the ball in proximity to its bask t as the Cardinals frantically sought a chance to shoot, this change in tactics bringing another point when Oliver fouled Chalmers, who sunk the resultant free toss.

It was a dizzy finish to a game that opened slowly and which developed not a thrill for the first tw nty minutes. At intermission, Maryland led by 12 to 6 by dint of some fine shooting by Bozey Berger.

Action speeded up and Catholic rallied strongly with th beginning of the second half. Goals by Sheary, Oliver and Spinelli quickly put the home club back in the running. With six minutes remaining, Sheary tied the score at 18-18, but Maryland in a flash drew away as Norris caged a foul and a field r. A one-pointer by Oliver and Sheary's last goal again created a deadlock leading up to Chalmer's heroic "sneak."

EDGAR ALLEN POE, one of America's greatest writers, was born in Boston, Mass., in 1809. In 1811, at the death of his mother, he was adopted by a Mrs. Allen, who gave him encouragement and the advantages of education. Poe turned to writing when he was 18. He fought a 4-year battle against discouragement and poverty to accomplish the work of a creative artist. "The Raven" is one of his best-known poems.

Charlie Hardenberg, in 1908, was a prominent lawyer in Jersey City, N. J. Becoming dissatisfied with the world, he decided to find peace and quiet as a hermit, and selected the tiny island of Little Watts in the Chesapeake Bay. The island itself is hardly larger than an ordinary city block. Taking up his solitary abode in the latter part of 1908, Hardenberg has lived his lonely life, passing time as he pleased, which for the most part is playing solitaire. During his sojourn on the island Hardenberg has used up more than 500 decks of cards. The only other living things on the island are the three chickens which he allows to run wild. It's mighty lonely, but Hardenberg says its just the thing for tired nerves.

It took fifteen years of the spare time of a German artisan to make the curious clock of straw. It is said to keep accurate time, although even all the works are made of straw.

Landis' Power Is Absolute Under Baseball Pact, Court Told in Milwaukee Test Case

Says Commissioner Can Act for "Best Interest of Game."

CHICAGO, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—As commissioner of organized baseball, Kenesaw M. Landis is empowered by an iron-clad agreement between himself, club owners and players to take whatever remedial or punitive actions in his field that he deems necessary to the best interests of the game, Attorney George Miller today told Judge Walter Lindley in Federal court.

Attorney Miller's statement was made at the start of his final argument as defense counsel for Commissioner Landis in the suit for an injunction to restrain Landis from further interference with the baseball contract of Fred Bennett, an outfielder for the Milwaukee Club of the American Association. The suit was regarded as an important one, as it was a test of the commissioner's broad powers in organized baseball.

Pact Regards His Decision Final.

"By the major-minor league agreement and that of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs it was agreed that as long as Mr. Landis was commissioner all parties to the agreement would regard his decisions as absolute and final," Attorney Miller said. "The Milwaukee Club and the St. Louis American League Club, which operates the Milwaukee Club as part shareholder, were parties to the agreement. Even the contract that Bennett signed with St. Louis and Milwaukee contained the clause empowering the commissioner with final decisions.

"By the agreement, Mr. Landis does not have to wait for even a complaint. He can, if he deems it a duty for the best interests of the game, investigate and take whatever remedial of punitive action that he deems necessary to the best interests of the game. That is exactly what he did in the Bennett case.

"He found that Bennett, because of the St. Louis farm system, had been kept in the minor leagues for two straight years under absolute control of the St. Louis Club, losing his rights under the rules to advance himself. He asked the St. Louis Club, through Owner Phil Ball, for a statement but only some misleading correspondence resulted and Mr. Landis took his action.

Requested St. Louis To Ask Waivers.

"He asked the St. Louis Club to take Bennett back to its own team, waive him to the American and National League clubs, and then, if waivers were made, to sell him outright—out of the St. Louis baseball chain. St. Louis refused and its action through Milwaukee was filed."

Attorney Miller advised Judge Kindley, who is hearing the case without a jury, he would prove that Commissioner Landis was within his legal rights in the case and that, even if he were not right, that the agreement entered into by St. Louis and Milwaukee given him absolute powers, must be lived up to within the eyes of the law.

Commissioner Landis did not appear in court and it was intimated he would not appear at any of the sessions.

Simmons' Engagement To Marry Is Broken

Philadelphia, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Annouceemnet that the engagement of Al Simmons, slugging left fielder of the world champion Philadelphia Athletics, and Miss Dorothy Kuhn, of Jenkintown, Pa., had been broken by mutual consent was made todya by the young woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kuhn.

"It is with great regret that I announce my daughter Dorothy and Al have decided not to marry, but to become just friends," Mr. Kuhn said. "Because of my intense admiration for Al, whom I considre one of the most likable boys I have ever met, I want every one to know how I feel toward him. If the young folks have decided not to marry, that's their business."

Simmons was due to leave Milwaukee today to motor to Hot Springs to start spring training. He will not go to Fort Myers, Fla., with the Athletics, but will do all his training in Arkansas.

Defense Says Browns Refuse to Release Bennett on Order.

Crawford Refuses To Join Coast Team

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—The Charlotte Observer said today Pat Crawford, infielder, traded by the Cincinnati Reds to Hollywood, of the Pacific League, had refused to report and may retire from professional baseball.

The paper said Crawford, former South Atlantic League star, had told friends years ago he would quit professional baseball if he were ever shunted to the minors.

New York Ban Affects Schmeling in Savannah

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Max Schmeling must check Savannah off the list of Southern cities in which he will give an exhibition.

The world's heavyweight champion today was barred from participating in any match or exhibition here. The action was taken by the Savannah Boxing Commission upon receipt of word from the New York Commission, with which it is affiliated, that sanction of Schmeling's appearance in Savannah would violate the working agreement between the two governing commissions.

GAMES TUESDAY.

Tech vs. Business.
Eastern vs. Central.

Reserve Strength of Lincoln Parkers Bring Victory.

Tech, Alone, Remains in Race; Johnson Case Wanes.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

YESTERDAY at Tech High Gym a brace of games, both starting out as meek as your Uncle Casper and finishing with an extra period of more than frenzied play, performed certain organic changes in the standings in the high school basket ball series. Eastern was boosted well out in front of the pack by its 37-30 victory over Business, Central's chances of tying for first place post were definitely squashed by reason of that team's loss to Western, 39-35.

These were two games worthy of happening in the last racing drive for the title tape. They were the first overtime high school games this season. They ran the gamut of most of the emotions permissible for high school games, touching at times the lowest depths of poor play and then capping these performances with play of rather transfixing skill. Eastern now needs but a game to clinch the championship.

Tech's Chances for Title Brighter.

Tech's cause of tying for the title brightened perceptively yesterday, when one of the high school officials doubted seriously whether anything would ever come of the proposed trial of the Tech-Central controversy of several games back. This principal stated that technically it was all right for Tech to make use of Everett Johnson, the guard having been eligible for participation in third semester athletics after being barred from second advisory sports participation by reason of hitting new low levels in calculus.

The Eastern-Business game possessed many harrowing moments for players and the 2,500 fans alike. Spectators, shortly before the start of the second quarter, were treated with some very visible master-minding on the part of Mr. Guyon, who came in from his reservation with what proved to be the freshest idea of the series. Yanking his league leading and raggedly playing five, he transplanted an earnest covey of reserve players onto the checkered Tech floor. Business was leading at the time, 6 to 2.

Business Barely Able To Stay Ahead.

In the realm of automobile racing, it is possible to slip into the vacuum which follows a speeding car and simply coast along without undue pressure on the gas. That seemed to have been what Business Team had been doing, coasting along in the vacuum created by the several-feet-taller Eastern Team.

Things grew different when the Eastern reserves came in the fray. The going slowed down, but Business was now faced with the difficulty of setting the pace itself, a chore to which this team is hardly accustomed. Strive as it might, it could but barely keep its head above the Eastern Peewees, partially because of overanxiety and partially because of Pinny Pinneran, a little slip of lubricated lightning who raised havoc perpetually in passing, dribbling and shooting. Business held a 1-point advantage—22 to 21—at the end of the third quarte, when the Eastern regulars came back into the game.

Calling upon some untapped reserve, the belabored Business combination—the same five boys who started the game—swarmed in and out under the legs and beneath the noses of Eastern to the extent that with but a minute to play the Stenogs were leading, 27 to 25. Bill Noonan, on a quick fadeaway of a snow bird ,tied the score just before the whistle, 2 7to 27.

Eastern Sweeps to Victory.

Eastern gathered up its ragged edges and swept over Business in the extra period. Cool shooting on the part of Kane, Lieb, Noonan and Shipley could not be denied. Business gave readily before the deluge of shots.

Western went out of the series with a bang, a biff and something akin to a zowie. Hanging on the heels of Central from start to finish, Western went ahes dat the very end of the legitimate game, saw their advantage nullified by a stirring Central rally and then went out and took the decision in the scorchingly played extra period.

Anthony Latona, playing his last high school game, put up a brilliant exhibition of individual shooting, pocketing 15 points and boosting his series total to 77 points, a mark which promises to stand as the year's record.

This game bristled with individual play, shining bits being contributed by Frank Cumberland and Hank Broadbent, the latter scintillating with a jumping snowbird which tied the score, 32-32, just before Mr. Haight sent the patrons quaking beneath the benches in announcing the death of the regulation time.

Gallagher Bout Is Called Honest But Poor Match

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Jose Santa, the Carnera of Portugal, who brought his 240 pounds and 6 feet 6 inches of height to America five months ago seeking fame and fortune in the ring, was suspended for six months today by the Illinois State Athletic Commission for engaging in a questionable fight at the Chicago Stadium last Wednesday night.

Santa's opponent, Knute Hansen, of Racine, Wis., was suspended indefinitely. In addition, Santa's entire purse of $1,500 was ordered forfeited and Hansen was fined his purse of $1,000.

Gallagher Declared Unfit Opponent.

Gen. Clinnin, chairman, said he would assume full responsibility for allowing a match between Marty Gallagher, Washington, D. C., heavyweight, and Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro, against his better judgment. Johnson and Gallagher appeared before the commission to explain their fight, in which Gallagher was knocked out in the second round of a scheduled ten-rounder on the same card with Santa and Hansen.

The commission decided the bout was not an exhibition pleasing to the public, but that it was an honest contest, although Gallagher was not a fit opponent. Both warriors were ordered paid in full—Johnson $2,500 and Gallagher $2,000. Gen. Clinnin said "the commission feels that it should not punish Gallagher for the mistake in judgment by the chairman of the commission."

Ex-Queen of Golfers Buys 2-Year-Old Racer

Nevada Queen was bred by "Wild Horse" Charlie Farrell at Lovelock, Nev., and brought to the winter meeting at Agua Caliente, where she promptly set two new dash records, winning with the greatest of ease.

Perkins, Reynolds In "Champion" Final

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—T. P. Perkins, British amateur champion and Malley Reynolds, Jacksonville, Fla., golfer, today went into the finals of the national championship of golf club champions.

Perkins, one of the longest hitters in the amateur ranks, used his distance to advantage and had little trouble with Wingate. His tee and fairway shots were so superbly executed that he was putting for birdies on most of the long shots.

Wingate, trying to match the flying Briton, pushed his shots and was in trouble often, while his putting touch, a factor in his progress to the semifinals, deserted him.

With Reynolds and Dann, however, it was a see-saw battle and hotly contested all the way.

Com. Reinicke to Quit As Navy Sports Head

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6.—Commander Frederick G. Reinicke, graduate manager of athletics and director of football at the United States Naval Academy, will leave here in June to take up an assignment at the Naval War College at Newport, he said today.

Commander Reinicke has been here only slightly more than a year, having succeeded Commander O. O. Kessing. The athletic assignment is usually two and some times three years, but Commander Reinicke has been anxious to go to the War College for some time. In his stay here Commander Reinicke has molded Navy's schedules, playing more neighborly teams than ever before, and reducing the schedule in the various sports to a considerable extent. It is his contention that they have been too lengthy. It is reported that Commander E. J. (Jimmie) Hall, gymnasium officer at the Academy, will succeed Commander Reinicke. Such is not definite, however.

Joseph Novak, former brilliant track athlete at the University of Illinois, now assistant director of physical education at St. John's College here, has been named assistant track coach at the Academy. He will assist Earl J. Thomson, who years ago established the world's record for the high hurdles while running for Canada though a student of Dartmouth. Novak will continue his connection at St. John's.

MARYLAND U. BOUTS TOP COLLEGE CARD TONIGHT

Old Line Ring Team Faces Va. Cadets

Colonial Swimmers in Debut; 2 Court Games Listed.

G. U. Basket Ball and Relay Teams Active Out of Town.

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY'S second boxing match of the season with V. M. I. as its opponent at College Park features tonight's program for Capital college athletes. Basket ball, swimming and track are the other sports in which competition is scheduled.

Disappointing in their initial match last Saturday, the Terrapin leather slingers are expected to show improvement against the Cadets. Coach Billy Whipp has worked intensively with his charges during the week and all who performed against Washington and Lee are slated to return to the ring.

What probably will prove the best bout of the card is that between Keener, of Maryland, and Epps, of V. M. I., in the welterweight class. Keener accounted for one of the Terrapins' two individual victories in the Washington and Lee affair. Epps is a Cadet veteran.

Program Opens at 8 o'Clock.

The program, which opens at 8 o'clock, is as follows: 115 pounds, Decker or Lake (Maryland), vs. Duane; 125 pounds, Burslem or Decker (Maryland), vs. Buck; 135 pounds, Keegan (Maryland) vs. Doyle; 145 pounds, Keener (Maryland) vs. Epps; 160 pounds, Mech (Maryland) vs. Spann; 175 pounds, Robbins (Maryland) vs. Kostalnek; unlimited, Holloway (Maryland), vs. Dunn.

At the Ambassador Hotel pool, the first intercollgeiate swimming meet of the winter is to be held, between George Washington and Johns Hopkins, starting at 7:30 o'clock. G. W. seeks revenge for a 2-point loss suffered at the Blue Jays' "fins" last year. The Colonials displayed good form in a recent amateur meet.

Tonight's basket ball for home consumption has Benjamin Franklin pitted against Callaudet on the latter's court and Strayer against Bliss at Silver Spring Armory, both starting at 8 o'clock. Benjamin Franklin is given only a slim chance of downing Gallaudet, while Strayer is a decided favorite to defeat Bliss.

G. U. Athletes on Foreign Floors.

Georgetown's court and track athletes are to show their wares out of town, the basket ball team facing the strong Temple University five at Philadelphia and the mile relay team competing in a classy field in the Millrose games at New York. The hoopsters of Columbus University will engage Shenandoah College at Dayton, Va.

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Miami Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

THE fourth important fixture of the current Miami meeting will be decided this afternoon, when the Hialeah Park Handicap, with a field of ten of the leading 3-year-olds and upward, will be run. The feature will be contested over a fast track and will carry an added value of $2,500.

PETO, sterling router in the Belair stud string, top weight of the field, with 118 pounds, appears best of the opposition he meets here. The Peter Pan colt established a new track record in his last start over the mile-and-70-yard route. J. F. Byers' SON O' BATTLE, a consistent 7-year-old, has displayed remarkable speed in recent efforts, and his second to Silverdale in the Miami Beach Handicap stamps him as the chief contender. OKAYBEE, from the Carroll Stable, a double winner at this track, is nicely weighted with 109 pounds, but may falter at the distance, but is favored to last long enough to gain the minor award.

FIRST RACE—BEGORRA, from the Bud Fisher Stable, is dropping down a notch in this event and, on his best form, should romp to an easy victory. POINCIANA, a surprise winner in her last start, has regained her speed and should prove the chief contender. EMULATOR appears best of the others and should account for the minor award.

SECOND RACE — GAN LEE has shown flashes of speed in recent attempts and, against this field, is selected to break into the winner's circle. JUSTA MOMENT, winner of his last start, is a strong possibility for the major honors. STELLA F., a promising juvenile in the C. A. Bidencope Stable, is favored for the show.

THIRD RACE — TRAITOR has shown the most consistent form of this lot and appears a standout. SUN MASK is well suited by the conditions and should furnish the opposition. RAMUS was beaten by SUN MASK in their last meeting and figures to get third money.

FOURTH RACE — OKAYBEE has been entered in the main event at a mile and a sixteenth but appears better suited by the shorter distance in this heat. The Carroll racer has all her speed and should lead this field to the wire. SILVERDALE, from the E. B. McLean Stable, has been asked to concede 18 pounds to the top selection, but figures second. ANGRY, a highly regarded gelding in the C. V. Whitney string, is given the show call.

SIXTH RACE—PHANTOM CLOUD, a clever router, has displayed staying qualities in recent starts and is selected to lead this way. DIRECTLY, a fair plater in the J. L. Dodge Stable, should force the pace. PERCEPTION, from the T. M. Cassidy establishment, is the show possibility.

SEVENTH RACE — TONY JOE, a recent winner, is at his best and should make it two straight. VESTA, from the Carreaud Stable, an easy winner of her last start, is the place selection. PRINCE TOKALON weakened at a mile and a sixteenth after setting the early pace and will favor the shorter distance. He is given the show call.

Capt. Dick Heekin, guard, gave the best of his many good performances for th eyear by nicking th eiron loop for 22 points.

ROBERTSON'S RIDING IS FEATURE

Pilots Home 4 Miami Winners, Including Morsel at 25-1.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Arthur Robertson, first-string rider of C. V. Whitney's Stable, now that Sonny Workman is in retirement, had a big day in the saddle at Hialeah Park this afternoon, riding four winners—Mynheer in the first race, Don Red in the second, Morsel in the fifth and Light View in the seventh. The first two were odds-on favorites, but Morsel, his third winner of the day, paid better than 25 to 1 in the machines. Light View rewarded his followers with a price slightly better than 3 to 1.

Robertson knows the shortest way home, and this won for him with Morsel, which, incidentally, caused the biggest surprise of the afternoon.

Robertson Gains 6 Lengths For Morsell on Turn.

He was away fairly well on the son of Vulcain and, rounding the stretch turn, brought him up fast on the rail, while Dedicate, which had been making the running, went wide, carrying Pennant Lass, the odds-on favorite, with him. As a result, Robertson saved about half a dozen lengths with Morsel and won by half that at the end.

By his four victories Robertson now heads Charley Kurtsinger for the honor of leading rider at the meeting. Robertson has thirteen winners to Kurtsinger's twelve.

Community Center League Fives Play in Post Tourney

Circuit's 14 Teams in Line; A. A. U. Registration for Unlimited and 145-Pound Teams Closes Tonight.

EVERY team in the Community Center Basketball League has signified its intention of entering the unlimited section of The Post's fifth annual A. A. U. tournament, which will be held at the Tech High School gym here, starting March 9.

Fourteen of the classiest unlimited cage teams in Washington and vicinity hold membership in the league. They are the Griffith-Consumers, Clovers, Potomac Boat Club, Petworth Mets, Crescents, Eastern Whirlwinds, Mercury, Mt. Vernon, DeMolay, Pontiac, Drakes, Monroes, Tremonts and Company E, of the D. C. National Guard.

Community Center League teams always have been preminently identified with local A. A. U. basketball tournaments. In 1929, the United Typewriter Grays, league champions, won the unlimited title in the tournament.

League's Team Long Prominent.

The winner and runner-up of last year's Community Center League race, the Woltz Photographers and the Potomac Boat Club five, respectively, made determined efforts to cop the A. A. U. unlimited crown. The Photographers were defeated in the semifinals by the Montrose Team, and the Boatmen, after battling their way to the finals, were nosed out for the championship by the same Montrose quintet.

Players Must Obtain Cards.

Every player participating in the tournament must fill out one of these blanks, which, when accepted, entitles him to a membership card stating he is a member in good standing of the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U.

Registration for unlimited and 145-pound classes in the District A. A. U. area closes tonight. Teams in the South Atlantic section may obtain registration by applying to Marvin H. Markel, Central Y. M. C. A., Baltimore.

Special to The Washington Post.

Laurel, Md., Feb. 6.—The Laurel Independents scored the biggest upset in the Intercity League season so far by walloping the Ellicott City Hoplites, 20 to 19, on the Armory floor here tonight before 500 persons. Bauer, Laurel center, sank the winning field goal in the last minute of play.

The Laurel Guards whipped the Montrose A. C., of Washington, 31 to 22, and the Black Pirates trounced the Boys' Club, also of Washington, 34 to 16, in two other games played on the same floor.

St. John's Triumphs Over Woodward, 22-19

St. John's added another victim to its growing list yesterday afternoon by handing Woodward a 22 to 19 beating on the Y. M. C. A. floor.

High scoring honors were shared by Augusterfer, of St. John's, with three field goals and two fouls to his credit, and Groff, of Woodward, who pocketed four two-pointers. The all-around play of Smith, center, also was prominent in the St. John's play.

U. S. GOVERNMENTS AND GERMANS CLIMB

RAIL FLOTATION PENDING

New York, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Government obligations of the United States and Germany shared the spotlight in the bond market today.

Corporate investment issues again displayed a firm tone but the bulk of the activity was concentrated in a comparatively small list. Second grade bonds were uncertain in their movements.

The notable strength United States Governments have displayed this week enabled them to climb ¼ of a point on the average today. Sales were well over $1,500,000, an unusually large volume for the stock exchange, and there were some reports that banks had made important purchases. Government holdings of New York reserve member banks showed a $65,000,000 increase in the week ended February 4, indicating that they were buyers rather than sellers during the recent decline.

The vitality of German issues, including some municipal and industrial obligations, was attributed to reports that Germany will obtain a $32,000,000 loan from French and American bankers. In a turnover of more than $400,000, the largest of any issue except Liberty 4¼s, the German International 5½ per cent loan advanced a full point to 76⅛, compared with its 1930 low of 68. The Dawes 7s now selling above par advanced ⅝ and German Central Agricultural Bank 7s rose 1¾. Berlin City Electric 6½s, Berlin Electric Elevated 6½s, Prussia Free State 6s, and United Steel Works 6½s also were strong.

While the week was the poorest of the year for providing new capital through bond flotations, signs of an early revival appeared. The New York Central contemplates selling $75,000,000 4½ per cent mortgage bonds as the first important bond financing it has done since 1922. The City of Chicago will sell $27,000,000 bonds next week, and Philadelphia has announced the sale of $15,000,000 4s on February 27.

PROFESSIONALS BID UP STOCKS' LEVEL

AUBURN AUTO CLIMBS 8

New York, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Professional traders saw fit to bid the stock market up today, but most of their interest was in specialty shares.

Late weakness of the rails attracted selling in other departments and final prices throughout the market were under the top, with net gains in the leaders reduced to fractions. Bonds improved. Commodities, however, did not do so well, for July and September wheat lost advances of about 2 cents and there was a half cent drop in bar silver.

The strongest stocks were those favored with special sponsorship. Auburn Auto soared 8 points and held most of the rise. Worthington Pump, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Diamond Match, Burroughs Adding Machine, Curtis Publishing, Ingersoll Rand and Radio A preferred closed 1 to more than 3 higher. A few tobaccos also rallied.

Best Prices Cancel Losses.

At their best prices American Can, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, New York Central and a few other pivotal issues had somewhat more than recovered Thursday's losses.

But in the late selling central broke 2¾ net, Atchison 1¾ and Baltimore & Ohio 1, and members of the industrial and utility families finished the day with nominal improvement. Oils, motors and coppers were steady and dull. Sales approximated 1,800,000 shares.

Much of the day's news had to do with the credit markets. Bankers' acceptances were cut another eighth to the lowest rates in history, a move designed to draw bills from the large supplies here by accepting banks. This revision—the second of the week—brought the asking rate on short term paper three-quarters of 1 per cent below the New York Federal Reserve rediscount figure.

Supply of Bills Small.

The available supply of bills is exceedingly small, but it was apparently the hope of dealers that banks now having a sizable profit on acceptances bought several weeks ago would be led to take advantage of the favorable situation.

So surfeited are the banks with funds that the clearing house members have made another reduction in interest paid on time deposits of longer than 30 days. The new level is 1½ per cent. Demand for short-term funds has seldom, if ever, been so light, and large sums go unloaned daily in the call market.

One of the results has been the departure to London of a substantial amount of American funds, to the marked advantage of sterling exchange, which today went to $4.86⅛ for cables, a new high for the year. Only last week sterling exchange on New York was so weak as to cause considerable apprehension over possible loss of gold to New York.

Business Reviews Quoted.

The weekly trade reviews reported slight fluctuations in the business pulse. "Further evidences of improvement are not lacking," said Dun's, "the trend in wholesale lines being helped by the greater interest displayed for spring merchandise. Road salesmen, however, do not find the response hoped for, as merchants are still in a cautious mood, seasonal requirements not only being subnormal but tardy in developing." Bradstreet's said the unseasonably warm weather over large sections of the country was retarding retail trade.

Corn, like wheat, reacted substantially from the day's best quotations, which had been around 2 cents a bushel higher. Net changes on both grains were nominal. Easiness in Liverpool and the weakness of silver both here and in London caused cotton to sag and the active months lost 3 to 4 points net.

Aside from the strength of sterling, the foreign exchanges were uninteresting. Shanghai steadied moderately.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Feb. 6 (A.P.).—Sudden setbacks in grain prices late today accompanied reports that snow storms were sweeping eastward from the Rockies on a 2,000-mile front. Chicago Weather Bureau officials said the reports, which pointed to general drought relief, were grossly exaggerated, but this information did not become well known until after trading was ended. On the downward flurry, sharp gains scored earlier in the day were wiped out and corn also reacted notwithstanding that widespread storms would be more bullish on corn than otherwise.

Wheat closed irregular, 1 cent lower to higher; corn, ⅛ to ⅜ up; oats, unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions all 10 cents decline to an equal advance.

Before misleading reports about prospective drought relief had abruptly turned all grains topsy-turvy, July wheat rose to the highest point reached in more than three weeks, an overnight jump of 2¼ cents, and corn sympathized. Unusual absence of selling pressure together with active commission buying was responsible, and was attributed to apparent inadequacy of drought relief. Only scattered rains and snowfalls were reported early, whereas crop experts said a general soaking was needed.

Announcements that bread in Liverpool was selling at 3 cents a pound loaf compared with 5 to 10 cents in this country failed to offset advices that drought in some domestic winter wheat districts has resulted in water supply rationing and prospective closing of schools. Other reports said abnormal dryness was a continuation of last year's drought, and extended from the Central West to the Middle Atlantic. At St. Louis December and January combined were asserted to show the driest condition for nearly a hundred years.

Corn owed its transient bulge largely to reports that narrowing of the price differential between corn and wheat would encourage heavier feed use of corn. It was also asserted that hog arrivals gave evidence of heavy feeding, indicative of liberal disappearance of corn from a crop the smallest with one exception since 1901. Oats paralleled the action of corn and wheat.

Provisions were steadied by firmness of hog values.

TOY PISTOL IS HELD CONCEALED WEAPON

WITNESS SAYS GUN REAL

A toy pistol was the chief exhibit in Prince Georges County police court yesterday, when Leo Gardiner, of Hall, Md., went on trial for assault and carrying concealed weapons.

Gardiner swore that the pistol he pointed at John Suesen, of Pohick, was the toy pistol found in his possession when he was arrested by Sheriff W. C. Hopkins. Suesen and another witness swore that the pistol was a "real one." Judge J. Chew Sheriff finally dismissed the assault charge, which had brought Gardiner into court.

The concealed weapons warrant was sworn out and served on Gardiner in open court, after evidence of the witnesses had brought out the fact that the pistol, toy or real, was concealed. Judge Sheriff fined the man $1 on this charge, after Sheriff Hopkins had appeared as a character witness for him.

Imprisoned for Year.

Conviction on a charge of driving while drunk brought a sentence of a year in the House of Correction for William Butler, of Clinton. He was also fined $10 for driving without a license, $10 for having false tags, and $25 for reckless driving. He was arrested by State Policeman W. A. Rogers.

James Medley, of Croome, was also arrested and fined as the owner and occupant of the car Butler was driving. He paid $10 for permitting his car to be operated with false tags, $10 for having no headlight and $10 for having no rear light.

Medley was also held for action of the grand jury, under bond of $100, for larceny of a coat from G. H. Anderson. Theodore Green, also accused in the larceny, was held under the same bond.

Sentenced in Assault.

James E. Fleet, of Bowie, was sentenced to six months in the house of correction for assault and battery on John T. Hebron. He was arrested by County Policeman V. M. Nichols.

Henry Butler, of Bowie, was fined $10 for being drunk and disorderly. A disorderly conduct charge cost Lewis H. Brown, of Camp Springs, a fine of $25. The warrant was sworn out by Lewis Day. James Johnson was committed to jail in default of a fine of $10 imposed for assault and battery.

Temple Biggs, of Jenkins Corner, asked for a jury trial on one charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, and Judge Sheriff took his personal bond in another case. He posted bond of $250 pending his jury trial. James Johnson was fined $10 for assault on James Wilson. Thomas Pinkney and William Johnson, who were charged with James Johnson, had their trials postponed until next week.

Alleging that she was deserted in 1922, Rosa R. Lettisaw yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce in Prince Georges County Circuit Court against Samuel H. Lettisaw, of Washington.

In her bill, filed through the law firm of Ryon and Hassall, the woman states that she was married in 1919. The couple had three children, Dorothy, 12, Ralph, 11, and Lawrence, 9, who are now in her custody, and she asks the court to award them to her, if the divorce is granted.

Two schools have sent in their returns to the superintendent of schools in the Red Cross drought relief drive. They are Cheltenham and Glenn Dale, both small schools and both contributed more than the tentative quota of ten cents per pupil.

Cheltenham was the first school to respond, with an average of more than 18 cents per pupil. With 55 children, it sent in $10. Glenn Dale, with 45 children, raised $13.85 overnight, an average of more than 30 cents per pupil, three times the amount asked for.

The relief methods of the county Red Cross were explained to the welfare committee of the County Federation of Women's Clubs by H. L. Leonard, chairman of the Central committee, at a meeting held in the office of Miss Ethel M. Regan in Hyattsville. Mrs. Wade H. Sheriff, of Decatur Heights, chairman of the welfare committee, presided.

To curb speeding on the Baltimore boulevard through Riverdale, a traffic light has been installed at Madison avenue. High speeds maintained by the motorists driving through the town have endangered the townspeople, it is held.

Funds for the light were raised by public subscription, sponsored by the Riverdale Citizens' Association. The drive was headed by Edwin Bolte, treasurer of the association.

By chasing a speeder last night, Prince Georges County policemen got both the speeder and a cargo of liquor, they reported. Patrick J. Kittricks, of Morse street northwest near Fourteenth street, was the driver of the car which police said contained 54 gallons of alleged whisky. His bond was set at $1,000.

Funeral services will be held Sunday in Luray, Va., for Irving Eugene Moyer, who died Thursday at his home in Riverdale, of pneumonia. Mr. Moyer had been for eighteen years an inspector for the Suburban Sanitary Commission. He was 47.

Alexandria Prisoner Says He Only Sought Place to Spend Night.

BLAZE DOES DAMAGE

Sergt. Edgar Sims and Sergt. Lawrence Padgett, of the local police, investigating a report that some one had broken into the West End School Building during the night, found a Negro who gave the name of Charles Baker, and who said he is from Richmond, hiding in the basement. Baker had a cut on his forehead which he said he sustained when he smashed a window to gain entrance to the building, seeking a night's lodging.

Nothing was missing from the building. Baker was taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where two stitches were taken in the cut on his head.

The roofs of houses 410 and 412 Wilkes street were considerably damaged by fire yesterday morning, caused by sparks from the chimney of No. 410, owned and occupied by Mrs. Abbie F. Bartlett. House No. 412, owned by J. A. Stuart, is unoccupied.

TRUCK CRASH HURTS 2 WASHINGTON MEN

CLUB WILL STAGE HUNT

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Two persons were injured, one seriously, when a delivery truck left the highway and crashed into a telephone pole while rounding a curve on the Washington-Richmond highway near Hunting Creek, just south of Alexandria. The truck was driven by William Ahern, of Gallatin street near Sixth street northwest, Washington, with J. E. Douglas, of Union court northwest, as passenger.

The truck was completely demolished, the body being torn from the chassis and splintered by the crash against the pole. The injured men were taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where Ahern was said to be suffering from numerous cuts about the head and possible fracture of the skull. Douglas received cuts about the head and face. Fairfax County Policeman A. W. Mills, who investigated the accident, reported that they attempted to round the sharp curve at a high rate of speed, causing the accident.

The Rev. Herbert Donovan, pastor of the Zion Episcopal Church at Fairfax, has recovered from a slight illness and plans to hold services in the churches in his charge tomorrow. The services at the Zion Church will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock; at the Church of the Good Shepherd, at Burke, in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and at the Holy Comforter Church, at Vienna, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Sunday school at the three churches will be held at the usual hours.

At a special meeting of the Floris Grange the following officers were installed for the coming year: Master, Holcomb Rogers, overseer, W. D. McNair; lecturer, Mrs. M. K. Stroud; steward, Jack Jatton; assistant steward, R. B. Nickell; gatekeeper, Paul Woods; lady assistant steward, Mary W. Nickell; chaplain, W. M. McNair; Ceres, Mrs. R. B. Nickell; Pomona, Mrs. Lula Kirkpatrick; Flora, Mrs. B. W. Middleton; treasurer, W. R. Crabill; secretary, Rebecca Middleton. The next meeting of the grange will be held in the auditorium of the Floris School on February 20.

At a meeting of the ways and means committee of the Herndon Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, held at the home of Mrs. Esther Thompson, plans were made for the supper which the chapter will give on Friday evening, February 13, in the basement of the Congregational Church.

Over 100 car loads of gas pipe have been unloaded in Herndon the past week. The Virginia Gas Transmission Co., which is laying 20-inch mains across the northern section of Fairfax County to carry natural gas from the Kentucky fields to the North, are employing over 30 local residents for the work in this section. The pipe is being loaded on trucks and taken to the various points of construction in the county.

The Herndon Branch of the Fairfax County Chapter of the American Red Cross held a supper in the basement of the Congregational Church last night. The proceeds will be placed in Fairfax County's quota of the drought relief fund.

Funeral services for Mrs. J. C. Thompson, a well-known resident of Fairfax, who died at her home on the Burke road Wednesday of heart trouble after an illness of several months, were held yesterday afternoon in the Oakton Church. The interment was in Flint Hill Cemetery at Oakton. Mrs. Thompson is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Thomas A. Burns and Mrs. J. J. Goode, and by an adopted son, George O. Swain.

Funeral services will be held this morning at 11 o'clock at Forestville for William Henry Wortman, father of Mrs. J. R. Shroy, of Spring Vale, who died Wednesday night. Mr. Wortman would have celebrated his eightieth birthday on February 17. He was born in Loudoun County, but had lived in Fairfax County for 37 years, and in Forestville, with his daughter, for the past fifteen years. The interment will be in Chestnut Grove Cemetery at Herndon. In addition to his daughter, he is survived by one sister, who lives in Ashburn, Va.

The weekly fox hunt of the Fairfax Hunt Club will start this morning from Seneca, on the Potomac River, and end at the clubhouse in the afternoon, where the hunt breakfast will be served. Miss Helen Graham, who is now residing in Connecticut, has presented the club with two thoroughbred fox hounds. The presentation was made through Robert D. Graham, of Fairfax, one of the directors of the club.

Special services in commemoration of the birthday of the National Boy Scouts will be held tomorrow in the Annandale Church.

Features in Tomorrow's Post

A prominent figure in national politics from 1888 to 1909, former Senator Henry Clay Hansbrough, of North Dakota, has lifted the veil of secrecy from many colorful and significant incidents during these two hectic decades in a series of articles which begin tomorrow in the Magazine Section of The Washington Post. They were written in collaboration with David Rankin Barbee, of The Post staff.

Senator Hansbrough served as a member of the Republican National Convention from 1888 to 1896, he was a representative from South Dakota from 1889 to 1891, when he was elected to the Senate in a service that continued until 1909. He also was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions in 1888 in Chicago, in Memphis in 1892 and in Philadelphia in 1900.

Washington soon will be the mecca for thousands of migratory birds returning from their winter in the South. An interesting article in tomorrow's magazine section tells of these vagabonds of the air, their definite routes of travel and other curious habits of the wanderers.

Try to solve the mystery of the slaying of a Chinese laundryman in a room from which no exit could be found. The gripping story is another in the magazine section.

EXPERT URGES CUT IN TOBACCO CROPS

FOREIGN DEMAND LESS

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (A.P.).—John A. Hicks, the Federal-State agricultural statistician, who has studied Virginia's dark tobacco all of his life, thinks 1931 will be a good year for the growers of this type of the weed, if they limit their production to less than 25,000,000 pounds.

Of course, Mr. Hicks qualified his prediction by making allowance for weather conditions. But he reasoned that the quality of the dark tobacco, of which central Virginia is the only area in the country producing this type, this year was very poor, and if the quality of the new crop is superior, he said, the demand for the better product should bring higher prices.

Despite the inferior crop that was caused by the drought of 1930, the prices paid for the fire-cured, or dark, type now being marketed, up to December 31 had averaged $9.03. Mr. Hicks said he believed with average weather conditions this year, the new crop prices would come nearer reaching the high level of 1929, which was an exceptional year.

Must Curb Production.

This, however, he said, is largely up to the grower, who must improve his crop, and curb his production. He reprimanded the farmer who wildly expands his acreage for the next year, because the crop of the preceding year brought a good price. This to Mr. Hicks seemed a sure way for the farmer to "cut his own throat."

The outlook for the Virginia fire-cured tobacco is sufficiently favorable to warrant a good 1931 crop, Mr. Hicks said, but he would not advise any farmer to exceed his 1930 crop, but on the contrary, his advice was to reduce his acreage this year. Stocks of old leaf on October 1, 1930, were 27,917,000 pounds, the lowest since 1923.

Considering the reduction of the 1930 crop by the drought to about 18,000,000 pounds, it was expected that stocks will be further reduced by October 1, 1931. An acreage equal to that of last year, if average yields are obtained, would produce from 25,000,000 to 28,000,000 pounds and result in a supply situation about like that of 1929, when the last encouraging prices were received by the growers.

Much of Poor Quality.

Prices of the 1930 crop have reflected the unusually low quality of the crop rather than any marked change in the demand, Mr. Hicks said. The prices paid for good quality tobacco over 16 inches in length were equal to or better than a year ago. In view of the scarcity of high quality tobacco in the 1930 crop, Mr. Hicks assumed that the better grades will be in greater demand in 1931, and that if the lower grades resume their normal relationship to the total crop, prices will average higher than for the 1930 crop.

Agricultural agencies in the State are planning to impress upon the growers of the Virginia fire-cured tobacco the necessity of curbing their acreage. In this connection the growers and the bankers who finance them have been invited to a meeting in Lynchburg, the largest of the dark tobacco markets, on February 13 and 14, to discuss the problem with representatives of the United States and the Virginia Departments of Agriculture, authorities from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the county agents working in the fire-cured area.

Foreign Demand Decreases.

Before the World War the dark tobacco was the principal export tobacco crop. But since that time the foreign demand has shown a marked decrease. Germany formerly was one of the principal importers of the crop, but even in the last eight years the demand has decreased by 50 per cent. Fire-cured exports to the United Kingdom have decreased from an average of 24,026,000 pounds over the five-year period 1923-1927 to less than 2,000,000 pounds in 1929. Exports to other foreign nations, with the exception of Belgium and Spain, have decreased in similar proportions. Meanwhile the exports of Belgium and Spain together increased approximately 34 per cent over the same period. Also, some of the decline in exports has been taken up in a greater domestic consumption, which has increased from 9,000,000 pounds in 1928 to 21,500,000 in 1928.

With the James River forming a northern boundary for the dark tobacco belt, farmers in Nelson, Buckingham, Amelia, Chesterfield, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Prince Edward, Cumberland, Appomattox, Campbell, Bedford and Amherst Counties are engaged in its production. These farmers, Mr. Hicks pointed out, do not suffer as much as the light-weed growers in an "off year," because tobacco, in most cases, is not their only crop.

The principal markets are at Lynchburg and Farmville. Mr. Hicks said the recent installation of the tobacco grading service by the Virginia department of agriculture has been of great value to the dark tobacco grower as well as to the producers of all other types.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

FOOTBALL A LA GATES.

THE University of Pennsylvania has ripped the over-emphasis off college football and other big-time athletics. Under a new program just announced by President Gates, a college football player will be just a studious young man who can make good in a scuffle.

* * * *

The new head of Pennsylvania has gone after football over-emphasis with an ax. Everything has been cut away except the cheering on Saturday afternoons from 2 to 5.

* * * *

Gridiron heroes are reduced to the chorus with the less muscular searchers after the higher education.

* * * *

The theory that the spotlight is mightier than the diploma is tossed into the ash can and, from now on there will be no soft spots for a Pennsylvania student just because he goes places and does things with a football.

* * * *

Even the time-honored training table gets the gate from Gates, and the deep-chested athletes will have to break bread with the boys who bruise easily.

* * * *

Holty-toity training camps in the country are outlawed and all glorification of the American full back is vetoed.

* * * *

Nothing has been done as yet about making the boys buy their own football uniforms, go to and from the big games at their own expense, and supply liniment for their personal rubdowns, but anything can happen now.

* * * *

UNDER the reforms at the University of Pennsylvania, the Grand Poobah of College Sports, the Professional Football Coach, is not only thrown out, but jumped on. He emerges flatter than a rubber mat.

* * * *

He now becomes a college professor with a college professor's pay check. This means that the long pampered pet of college athletics will get no better grade of groceries than a professor of dead languages; that he will have to struggle as much to keep up the automobile payments as the college authority on economics, and that at the end of the year he will not even be any better off financially than the college dean. Fancy that!

Under President Gates' new system, attendance by football candidates at football practice will not be compulsory. Believe it or not, it will hereafter be possible for a player to stay away from the workout if he does n t "feel up to engaging in practice due to worry over his studies or other reasons." A certain number of football "cuts" will be allowed each season.

* * * *

This definitely gives a little consideration to the student who has moments when he feels he would rather work off a few conditions in higher mathematics than go out and get kicked in the head some more.

* * * *

Proselyting of athletes is forbidden and no freshman will be given financial aid regardless of how good he is through a broken field with a loose ball.

* * * *

It all seems very novel and very interesting. But the football fans will withhold their verdict until they see what happens when a candidate for the varsity replies to a rebuke from the coach with a "yes, professor."

STOPPING JOHN D.

A CERTAIN magazine editor, back from a vacation at Ormond Beach, insists that when John D. Rockefeller handed him one of those poems, which he is distributing instead of dimes this season, he floored him by slipping back one of those slips reading: "Not suited to our needs at this time, but rejection implies no lack of merit."

Prof. Einstein is said to have been offered a place on the Wickersham Commission. The theory is that there might as well be somebody on it who can make its future reports good and deep.

* * * *

* * * *

Sir Hubert Wilkins plans to go under the North Pole by submarine. Why one submarine? Why not do it riding two submarines abreast?

Yale has bought another big tract of land to add to its athletic field. That song, "March, March On Down the Field," will soon have to be accompanied by an issue of rations for a three-days' hike.

APPLE GROWERS ASK RATE CASE REVIEW

NEW TARIFF IN EFFECT

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 6. Claiming freight rate parity on apples with the New York apple growing section, the Virginia Horticultural Society, backed by the State Corporation Commission and fruit growing interests of the Shenandoah area, has petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for a reopening and reargument of the Virginia apple rate case, recently decided. The new rates became operative this week on railroads east of the Mississippi. Some rates were lowered and some increased.

Evidence in the apple rate case was given to show that both the carriers and the fruit growers of New York State admitted such parity should obtain, according to the Virginia petition, which was prepared by H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel for the State Corporation Commission.

If the contentions of the petition are sustained, the Virginia apple industry, which won rate reductions amounting to $500,000 a year in the main case, will be placed on an equal basis with growers of the chief competitive area and be afforded trade opportunities of great benefit to Virginia, it was said.

The evidence, of carrier witnesses and of witnesses for New York growers in the case "is equivalent to a stipulation by the complainants and carrier representatives that the rates from origin territory should be on no higher level than New York," said the petition.

Figures worked out on the new rate basis and presented in support of the petition showed that, for equal distances, shippers from Winchester, chief apple shipping point in Virginia, to representative points, would pay upwards of $11 per car more in freight rates than shippers from the New York State apple area.

The apple rate case deals specifically with rates on apples in carloads from points in Virginia, West Virginia, Cumberland, Md., and points on the Western Maryland Railroad east of Cumberland to Williamsport, Md., inclusive, to destinations on or east of the Mississippi.
